SWEET PREVENTS ATTEMPT TO SEAT OUSTED SOCIALISTS

STAGE SET FOR TRIAL TODAY

Hilliquit Declares Socialists Will Walk Out if They Are Treated Unfairly.

BAR COMMITTEE ON GROUND

Reported in Albany That Deportation of Three of Defendants Will Be Asked.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 19.—On the eve of the hearing which is to begin before the Assembly Judiciary Committee tomorrow forenoon to determine whether the five suspended Socialist members shall take their seats, several attempts were made in the Assembly tonight to bring up their expulsion for debate. Parliamentary rulings by Speaker Sweet blocked all but one.

Assemblyman William C. Amos, a New York City Republican, first offered three resolutions, on the plea that they were privileged. One pronounced every act of the Assembly since the five Socialists were ousted invalid on the ground that in their absence the Assembly had been composed of 145 members instead of 150 as required by the Constitution; another provided that an opportunity should be accorded all members to explain their vote on the ouster resolution on the ground that because of criticism the Assemblymen had a right to set themselves straight in the eyes of their constituents, and the third called for the reseating of the five Socialists pending the hearing.

Speaker Sweet ruled all out of order.

Assemblyman Joseph Sternberg offered a resolution to expunge from the Assembly record the attack on Charles E. Hughes made by Assemblyman Martin G. McCue, a Tammany Democrat. Mr. Steinberg represents the Fifteenth Manhattan District of which Mr. Hughes, who arrived here tonight is a resident. Speaker Sweet ruled this out of order.

Assemblyman J. Fairfax McLaughlin, a Bronx Democrat, one of the two members who voted against the ouster resolution, offered a resolution, eliminating the Attorney General as counsel for the Judiciary Committee, on the ground that he was an official of the executive branch of the State Government and as such had no place in an investigation affecting exclusively the legislative branch. This also was ruled out of order by the speaker.

Hot Debate on Speaker's Rulings.

The Assembly Chamber was jammed with visitors, who overflowed into the gallery, when the heated debate on the resolutions began.

Assemblyman Amos provoked a jeer from the up-State Republican Assemblymen when he introduced first his resolution to afford members an opportunity to explain their vote.

"Out of order because it calls for an amendment to the rules, which can be offered only after due notice," said the Speaker.

Mr. Amos appealed and asked for a slow roll call.

"Take your little rule book and study it and you won't ask for such resolutions to be considered at this time," admonished the Speaker, denying the request.

Here Assemblyman Steinberg jumped to his feet.

"I have a resolution which I think is a privileged one and I offer mine," he said. It expunged the McCue attack on Hughes from the record.

The Speaker held it referred to a "gentleman not a member of this House," and therefore was not privileged.

Assemblyman McLaughlin then offered his resolution, excluding the Attorney General from the hearing. This the Speaker temporarily sidetracked on the ground that it sought to amend the original suspension resolution, but Assemblyman McCue intervened.

"Don't let us have, Mr. Speaker, any more of this talk about this iron sledge we hear so much about," he said. "I appeal, too, from the Chair's decision and ask for debate on it."

Cuvillier Would Shoot Them if Guilty.

This brought the resolution out in the open and Assemblyman Cuvillier rose to the occasion.

"Since these charges were brought," he said, "it has made me tired to listen to those with spineless backs who voted a week ago on the Donohue resolution, declaring the suspension of the five Socialist members unjust; who one day voted as they felt they should vote and the next day, seized with fright of their constituents, reversed themselves.

Up-State Republicans applauded.

"I am an American first and a Democrat second," Mr. Cuvillier continued. "If these men are guilty as charged, they should not be expelled, but should be taken out and shot. If they are innocent I shall be the first to vote for seating them."

"Is the gentleman a member of the Judiciary Committee before which body these men are going on trial?" asked Mr. Amos.

"He is," said the Speaker.

"Then I feel that by his latest state-

Meuse Breaks Through Dike in Holland, Floods Big Area

THE HAGUE, Jan. 17.—The rising waters of the River Meuse have broken a hole in the dike near Nijmegen, two and one-half miles from the German frontier, flooding a large tract of country. The railway has been swept away and traffic dislocated.

The occupants of houses in the flooded area fled to the roofs to await rescue, and boats have been sent by rail to assist them. Many cattle have been drowned.

TUG CREWS START NEW STRIKE HERE

ONLY 500 OUT, SAYS OFFICIAL

Strikers Include Firemen, Deckhands, and Cooks—Both Sides Expect Agreement Soon.

An unheralded strike of firemen, deckhands, cooks and other employes of the harbor tug boats, which began at 6 o'clock yesterday morning, and has the possibility of extending to the thousands of other marine employes of the Port of New York, has already involved 4,000 men and tied up at least 500 tugs, according to union officials. The demands of the men include an increase of approximately $35 a month in wages, and union officials said last night that 200 of the tow boat owners had agreed to the proposed new wage scale.

The union officials said last night that they made no claim that the strike so far had caused any serious difficulty, but they declared that unless settlement is speedily made the food and coal situation in New York is very likely to be such as to give grave concern. An officials of the union said that negotiations had not been broken off and that it is probable there will be an agreement with the employers today or tomorrow, before the situation becomes serious.

Late last night Frederick A. Russell, President of the New York Tow Boat Exchange, said that he expected all strikers would return to work this morning at the old scale of hours and wages. He said that about 300 boatmen were on strike and that the harbor traffic was not seriously affected. He asserted that the men had been misled and that all the difficulties would be settled today.

Mr. Russell said that efforts of the Arbitration Board, of which he is Chairman, to settle the dispute, had proved futile because of the four representatives appointed by the harbor boatmen. Two were from the faction which lost its local charter from the International Longshoremen's Union, and the appointees of the Marine Engineers' and Firemen's local refused to sit on a board with the members of the outlawed faction.

Mr. Russell said the captains and engineers were not involved in the strike. "They recognize their agreement as being in full force and as a result are continuing in their jobs," he added.

Frank W. Korb, Assistant Secretary of the Consolidated Engineers Workers' Beneficial Association, said that about 800 tugs are represented in the organization that has gone on strike, but did not know how many persons on the tugs were affected. He said that the members of his union were living up to their contract and remaining at work.

The Tow Boat Exchange minimized the situation.

The demands of the union are for an increase of approximately 35 per cent. in wages, advancing the men as follows: The first deck hands to $115 a month; second deck hands, $110; firemen and oilers, $120; cooks, $115. It is provided in the proposed new agreement that forty-eight hours constitute a week and that 208 days are to be considered a year—ten less than at present. It is also provided that the firemen are to be paid for getting the boat ready, while at present they use an hour in steaming up but are paid for only ten hours. The cooks also are to be allowed one hour for ordering provisions. The men ask for $1 a day subsistence instead of 50 cents as at present.

The union leaders say that their contract expired on Dec. 31, 1919, while the towboat owners contend that the contract entered into last April has some time yet in which to run.

A committee representing the Hotel Association of New York and the Joint Committee of Stationary Firemen and Engineers was in session at the headquarters of the Hotel Association, Thirty-third Street and Fifth Avenue, for several hours yesterday afternoon in an effort to settle the controversy over the request for 30 per cent. increase in wages for the engineers, firemen, oilers, and helpers. At the close it was announced that another meeting would be held Saturday afternoon. Meanwhile the men are to continue at work. The principal point at issue, it is understood, is that of recognition of the union. Union officials said that only in a few instances did employes go out on strike yesterday in apartment houses and office building, the matter of the hotels having already been delayed for twenty-four hours.

DEPORTEES CROSS SOVIET FRONTIER, BUT MAY NOT STAY

GOT A CORDIAL WELCOME

DISTRIBUTE AMERICAN FOOD

Emma Goldman in High Spirits, but Says She Loves Americans and Will Return.

TERIJOKI, Jan. 19 (Associated Press).—The band of Bolsheviki and anarchists deported from the United States is safely across the Russian frontier tonight, but whether all the members of the party will remain safe in Soviet Russia is a question to be determined by the Bolshevist authorities.

Hardly had the last of them passed over the border than a belated telegram reached the Finnish military officials in charge of the transfer announcing that the Soviet Government had decided to permit only three of the deportees to enter. Their names have not been made public, but those thus favored are believed to be Emma Goldman, Alexander Berkman, and Peter Blansky [Blanky?].

The telegram is incomprehensible in view of the fact that a delegation, including the wife of Maxim Gorky, came out to receive the exiles, and elaborate preparations had been made by the frontier Bolsheviki to welcome them.

The undesirable aliens, headed by Berkman and Emma Goldman, entered Soviet Russia at 2 o'clock this afternoon and received an enthusiastic welcome. Laden with suitcases and boxes they trudged through the deep snow, laughing and singing revolutionary songs as they neared the border. Hearty cheers were raised by Russians, waiting for them on the other side of the frozen Systerbak River, which separates the Finnish and Bolshevist lines.

Willing hands helped them to scramble up the steep banks, and amid the ruins of the war-wrecked town of Bielo-Ostrov, overlooking the stream, the Bolsheviki gave the exiles a vociferous greeting that stirred up a frenzy of enthusiasm and delight among the newcomers. They dropped their luggage, whipped off their caps as a military band played the Bolshevist anthem, and, cheering wildly, broke open their boxes of food and cigarettes, brought from the Buford, distributing them lavishly among the crowd.

An amusing sight was a Bolshevist officer waving a can of American pork and beans as he gave orders to the soldiers. A mounted Brigadier commanded the troops, which included boys, who appeared to be scarcely more than 12 years of age. Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman were last to cross the river, waiting until the others were safely over.

"This is the greatest moment of my life," exclaimed Miss Goldman to The Associated Press. "After thirty-five years of absence I am returning to Russia with a feeling of awe. I am glad to leave America, but I love the American people and expect to return there some day."

Discussing her plans, she said she would continue to write for American publications.

DENIES BRUTAL TREATMENT.

Secretary Wilson Says He Has Heard of No Case on Buford.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Replying to the charges made by Hector M. Holmes, of Boston, that the deportation of some of the radicals aboard the steamship Buford was "brutal," Secretary of Labor Wilson declared, in a statement tonight, that although the expulsion of thousands of aliens each year cannot be accomplished without some suffering, both to the deported and their families, he had not heard of any specific cases of brutality in the "Buford" deportations.

In a letter to Secretary Wilson, Holmes said that never in history have deportations been "more brutal than some particular cases involved in the Buford, where husbands and fathers were torn from their families, probably never to be reunited, and were given no time whatever in which to arrange their affairs and transfer their property."

Secretary Wilson said in his reply, it should be realized that the statutes which explicitly require deportation of aliens do not take family suffering into account any more than penal laws do. Although favoring the expulsion of aliens by judicial determination, rather than by administrative actions, he declared that as long as the duty devolved upon the Department of Labor, it will perform its functions with as little suffering to the aliens and their families as the circumstances will permit.

Bill for Increasing War Decorations Passes Senate

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Without debate the Senate today passed a House bill amending existing acts so as to enable military decorations to be awarded on the recommendation of officers lower than the grade of General.

This bill, which now goes to the President, is designed to enable the conferring of decorations upon a large number of American soldiers who served in France under officers with a rank lower than that of General.

SOVIET MUST DEAL WITH NEW AGENTS

ALLIED POSITION RESTATED

British Officially Reiterate That Trade Move Is Directed Against Bolshevist Government.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 19.—M. Litvinoff, the Soviet representative here, said today that he had not yet been approached concerning the Supreme Council's decision to raise the blockade, but that he was ready to negotiate if approached.

Should his Government agree to the suggested exchange, he added, it must be through new representatives of the co-operative societies, and not through a few of the former representatives in London and Paris, who, he declared, were counter-revolutionaries.

Litvinoff had no knowledge of the Soviet Government's intentions, but believed that it would be favorable to the proposition.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—One of the influences which prompted Premier Lloyd George to put forward a plan to raise the Russian blockade, it is learned, was a private letter from the Food Controller, George H. Roberts, who pointed out that if arrangements could be made to get foodstuffs from Russia the prices in England, which primarily depended so largely on Russia for food, would rapidly decrease.

Another influence was a long telegram from James O'Grady, representing the British Government in the negotiations at Copenhagen, stating that his negotiations with Litvinoff, the Russian Soviet representative, which were subject to several hitches, could be made much easier if the blockade were lifted. That message was delivered to the Premier on Friday last.

Just what foodstuffs are in Russia, where they are, and who controls them is somewhat vague, the Food Ministry announces, but the best information in the hands of the Ministry shows that there must be an enormous amount. Controller Roberts's statement that there are 3,000,000 tons of wheat was declared today to be based on reports which the Ministry had received from time to time.

That the military successes of the Soviet forces were the cause of the action of the Allies in deciding to permit the reopening of trade with Russia, is the claim made in a wireless statement from Moscow picked up here in which industrial Russia is urged to apply itself to its tasks. The message says:

"The blockade ring has been broken by the victories of the Red army. The army of labor has started its campaign. The workers defeated the enemy when thousands of faithful hands took up the matter. To your lathes, machines, ratchets, hammers and shovels! There is work for horny hands!"

British Official Attitude.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—An exposition of the British official view in regard to the decision of the Supreme Council in Paris is that there are various difficulties to be faced in the new situation in Russia, the chief of them being the very serious shortage of rolling stock in that country. This will naturally impede the transit of grain, etc., to Odessa for shipment.

It is understood that this obstacle, among others, is receiving the attention of the Supreme Council but so far from a re-opening of trade being intended by the Allied Council as the first step toward an understanding with the Bolshevist Government, its intention lies in an exactly contrary direction.

It is known that the Russian Co-operative Societies, in whose interests the move has been taken, are far from being Bolshevist in sympathy.

Under the present conditions Russia, as a whole, is in the unenviable position of being a mass of miscellaneous matter forced to cohere by the force of outside pressure. When this pressure has been removed, it is thought by the experts, there is every possibility of the various constituent elements falling asunder and this will be bad for the Bolsheviki if it turns out that they have no genuine majority among the Russian people.

Apart from the popularity, or otherwise, of the political theories of the Soviets, there are economic reasons why their rule should not be acceptable, especially to the peasants. These latter are storing their grain and have been for many months, because the existing government is utterly unable to supply them with boots and clothing, two articles of which they stand most in need, and for which they are only too willing to exchange it.

Provision of these indispensable articles, together with the renewing of

ALLIES' DEMAND FOR THE KAISER STIRS HOLLAND

Some Say Dutch Will Ask Him to Give Himself Up Voluntarily.

LONDON DOUBTS SURRENDER

CRIMES TO BE EXPIATED

Dutch Told They Will Be Negligent of Duty if They Reject the Plea.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 19.—Deep emotion has been caused in Holland by the allied demand for the extradition of former Emperor William of Germany, according to a dispatch from The Hague.

Belief is expressed at the Dutch capital, it is said, that pressing measures will be taken with a view to inducing him to place himself voluntarily at the disposal of the Allies.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—From a high diplomatic source in London The Chronicle learns that it is regarded as certain that the Dutch Government will decline to hand over the ex-Kaiser for trial.

The Chronicle adds that it is thought possible that, in order to avert any possibility of strained relations between the allied Governments and Holland an arrangement may be effected by which the ex-Kaiser would be interned, perhaps in Holland, under conditions mutually agreeable to all the Governments concerned.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—Holland is told in the allied note demanding the extradition of former Emperor William of Germany that she will "not fulfill her international duty" if she refuses to associate herself with the Entente powers in chastising crimes committed by Germans during the war. The text of the note sent to The Hague, which was made public this morning, reads:

"PARIS, Jan. 15.

"In notifying by these presents the Netherlands Government and Queen of the text of Article 227 of the Treaty of Versailles, a certified copy of which is annexed, which came into force Jan. 10, the powers have the honor to make known at the same time that they have decided to put into execution without delay this article. [Article 227 "publicly arraigns William II. of Germany for a supreme offense against international morality and the sanctity of treaties," and declares the allied and associated powers will address a request to the Netherlands Government for his surrender in order that he may be placed on trial.]

"Consequently, the Powers address to the government of the Netherlands an official demand to deliver into their hands William of Hohenzollern, former Emperor of Germany, in order that he may be judged.

"Individuals residing in Germany against whom the allied and associated powers have brought charges are to be delivered to them under Article 228 of the peace treaty, and the former Emperor, if he had remained in Germany, would have been delivered under the same conditions by the German Government.

Recites German Misdeeds.

"The Netherlands Government is conversant with the incontrovertible reasons which imperiously exact that premeditated violations of international treaties, as well as systematic disregard of the most sacred rules and rights of nations, should receive as regards everyone, including the highest placed personalities, special punishment provided by the Peace Congress. The powers briefly recall, among so many crimes, the cynic violation of the neutrality of Belgium and Luxembourg, the barbarous and pitiless system of hostages, deportation en masse, the carrying off of young girls from the City of Lille, who were torn from their families and delivered defenseless to the worst promiscuity; the systematic devastation of entire regions without military utility, the submarine war without restriction, including inhuman abandonment of victims on the high seas, and innumerable acts against noncombatants committed by German authority in violation of the laws of war.

"Responsibility, at least moral, for all these acts reaches up to the supreme head who ordered them, or made abusive use of his full powers to infringe, or to allow infringement, upon the most sacred regulations of human conscience.

"The Powers cannot conceive that the government of the Netherlands can regard with less reprobation than themselves the immmense responsibility of the former Emperor.

"Holland would not fulfill her international duty if she refused to associate herself with other nations as far as her means allow in undertaking or at least not hindering chastisement of the crimes committed.

"In addressing this demand to the Dutch Government, the powers believe it their duty to emphasize its special character. It is their duty to insure the execution of Article 227 without allowing themselves to be stopped by arguments, because it is not a question of

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The British, French, and Italian Governments have reached an agreement on Fiume and the Adriatic question which is now before President Wilson for his consideration in the shape of a memorandum agreed upon by Premiers Lloyd George and Clemenceau on Jan. 5 and accepted by Premier Nitti on Jan. 7.

It was officially admitted today that such a memorandum as approved by the three Premiers had reached Washington, and that there had been exchanges of views between Washington and Paris, but it was impossible to ascertain the character of the memorandum of agreement that had been submitted to President Wilson.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—Despite the general feeling throughout Paris that the Jugoslavs will not accept Italy's Adriatic proposals, Premier Nitti spoke optimistically tonight.

"I hope to go away tomorrow," he said, "having solved the Adriatic question. We have shown great moderation. The compact of London was the basis upon which Italy entered the war. France and England adhere to this agreement and guarantee its fulfillment. Clemenceau and Lloyd George having come to an agreement, I think that Jugoslavia will meet us in the same spirit of conciliation we have shown. We feel, too that the United States should come around, seeing the calm and democratic behavior of Italy, and be on our side.

"No sacrifice for the Jugoslavs is involved, and if they reject our proposals they will be taking serious responsibility. Nothing would be left to us but to ask the integral application of the Treaty of London. We have given up the islands and the whole of Dalmatia excepting Zara. The only offset to these concessions is the town of Fiume, and there we have conceded the internationalization of the port and railway under the League of Nations, thus fully protecting the Jugoslavs' interests in a sea outlet. No Italian Government could do more and hope to survive.

"We all need peace for our enemies as well as for ourselves. The time has come to quit calling them enemies. Germany and Austria furnished a consuming and producing market for 120,000,000 people which was wiped out by the war. The war is over, and we should begin thinking of a whole Europe. The war was a triumph for justice, but now justice needs peace. We want a peace that is real, and not merely a peace in name. I am glad to observe that strong American financial interests, supported by representatives of the country's best citizenship, are approaching the European situation in this broad spirit.

"I want to say," concluded Signor Nitti, "that Italy has gone her limit in renunciation. At the maximum our territorial demands were small, and included far fewer foreigners than any other country, not even the new States like Jugoslavia and Czechoslovakia. France and England have taken in eight or ten times as many. Of all the European countries Italy has most respected the principle of nationality. If all our claims were allowed the peoples of other tongues and races would constitute only 3 per cent. of Italy's population."

CHALLENGES WOOD TO OHIO CONTEST

WILL NOT BE 'FAVORITE SON'

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Senator Harding of Ohio, who aspires to the Republican nomination for President, made it clear today that he declines to be placed before the convention as a "mere favorite son," that he wants the support of those who will present his name through all the balloting or not at all; in other words, Mr. Harding indicated that he does not look with favor on efforts said to have been inspired by General Leonard Wood's managers to get Ohio's indorsement for the General as "second choice" to Senator Harding.

"If there is any doubt as to the real choice of Ohio," said Senator Harding, "let us invoke the real preference by an expression of the Republican voters at the primary polls."

Mr. Harding's statement started out by nominating Harry Daughtery of Columbus, one of the Harding campaign managers, as one of Ohio's "Big Four" to the convention. The statement said:

"Three of the proposed Delegates at Large from Ohio to the National Republican Convention have been suggested, they have given assurance of their willingness to stand for election, and have been advised of that approval by me, which it was generally thought the law necessitated. One is ex-Governor Myron T. Herrick, enthusiastically proposed by Cleveland and other Republicans and cordially approved. Another is ex-Governor Frank B. Willis, whose former official position and national acquaintance entitle him to like consideration. The same cordial approval was assured. The third is Mayor John Galvin, suggested by resolution of the Hamilton County Republican organization, and instantly accepted as an ideal selection, which Ohio Republicans will delight to ratify.

"This leaves but one place on the so-called Big Four and in the absence of convention facilities to compare notes and compose any differences, there may be many suggestions, because hundreds of Republicans in Ohio would creditably fill the place. Under the rights of a candidate I am assuming to propose the fourth, and have asked Harry M. Daugherty to stand for election. This is done contrary to the wishes and ad-

TREATY CONFEREES STRIKE A 'SANDBAR'

Reach Lenroot Plural-Voting Reservation and Are Unable to Make Progress.

NEW TILT ON COLLEGE POLL

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The bipartisan conference on treaty compromise was resumed today, and the Senators had two hours and a half of discussion. The question now before them is the difficult one of plural voting, embraced in the Lenroot reservation, which is No. 11 of the Lodge reservations.

When the meeting adjourned Senator Hitchcock, after stating that "some headway" had been made on minor points, said the conference was "on a sandbar" so far as the Lenroot reservation was concerned. He declined to go into details.

Senator Lodge seemed less disposed to view the situation seriously, but would only say that with the possible exception of one man the conferees seem genuinely desirous of compromising the differences.

The Lenroot reservation was one of the hardest points to settle in the Senate. The Johnson amendment, covering the same question, was rejected by only three votes. Some Senators have stated that but for the promise that the Lenroot reservation would take care of the matter as effectively as the Johnson amendment the latter would have been adopted. The question at issue is the number of votes the United States has compared with the British Empire. The Lenroot reservation provides that the United States shall not be bound by any decision of the League in the making of which any other nation had more votes than the United States.

The conferees will meet again tomorrow and tackle the problem again. If it becomes apparent that they are in danger of deadlocking some of the conferees are prepared to move that the reservation be laid aside temporarily and some other matter be taken up.

Mr. Lodge said today:

"If this group of Senators cannot agree, no group can," said Mr. Lodge. Failure of the present attempt will write finis to all compromise efforts, Senator Lodge thinks. This opinion is shared by some others.

The Senate was stirred up again today when Senator Hitchcock, referring

DANIELS CHALLENGES PROOF

DEFENDS NAVY IN THE WAR

ADMIRAL TELLS OF AWARDS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The Senate Naval Committee today instructed the Hale sub-committee to make a thorough investigation of the broadest scope into the charges of inefficiency, mismanagement, and lack of co-operation made by Read Admiral William S. Sims against the Navy Department in the memorandum which he read on Saturday while a witness at the investigation on naval war decorations.

The same sub-committee which is investigating the awarding of medals is to conduct the broader inquiry as soon as it has disposed of its present task.

Secretary Daniels declared this afternoon that he wanted the whole matter sifted to the very bottom.

"Rear Admiral Sims will have to justify his charges," said Secretary Daniels, "and I will see to it that the proper tribunal is provided before which he may do that."

After Mr. Daniels had learned that the Senate Naval Committee had decided to make a sweeping investigation, he said:

"Since the Senate Committee is going into the matter I am prepared to turn over to that committee all the records of the department bearing upon the matter, and I stand ready to set before the committee any person in the Navy Department it may wish to interrogate. I do not consider it wise to provide a tribunal before which Rear Admiral Sims may appear while the matter is under consideration by the Senate Committee, but shall await the result of its investigation."

Another development was a decision by the full committee to appoint a sub-committee to decide whether there ought to be an investigation of charges made by John R. Rathom, editor of The Providence Journal, that with Secretary Daniels's knowledge "many seamen in the navy have been used for most vile and nameless practices in order to entrap innocent men." Mr. Rathom's accusations were aimed at the methods alleged to have been used by the Division of Naval Intelligence in obtaining evidence.

Naval Court of Inquiry Forecast.

There was no doubt tonight that if the Senate Committee failed to sift the Sims charges to the satisfaction of Secretary Daniels the Navy itself would provide its own inquiry into the charges, and if this is done it will probably take the form of a Naval Court of Inquiry similar to that which was convened in the Sampson-Schley controversy. In that event the Court of Inquiry would be composed of high ranking officers not directly involved in the controversy.

In the opinion of many a Naval Court of Inquiry will ultimately have to be convened because many of the issues raised by Admiral Sims deal with questions of naval strategy and policy in wartime, upon which high ranking officers only would be fully qualified to deal from a naval viewpoint, and which might not be thoroughly dealt with by civilian members of a Congressional committee.

The full Senate Naval Committee met this morning to consider the situation created by Admiral Sims's charges. The sub-committee recognized the fact that it had no authority to go into such questions, as its instructions covered nothing but the question of naval decorations. Senator Hale, Chairman of the sub-committee, presented the situation to the full committee and asked for instructions.

Senator Pittman of Nevada, a Democrat and a member of the sub-committee, suggested that if the broader investigation based on Admiral Sims's charges were undertaken it should be carried on by the entire committee. When Mr. Pittman put this suggestion in the form of a motion it was voted down, after committee members had said that they could not find time from other duties to attend hearings.

A second suggestion by Senator Pittman that a special committee be appointed for the general investigation was also vetoed, when Senator Lodge raised the objection that Senators have too many committee meetings to attend as it is and that the appointment of another sub-committee would not materially hasten the inquiry.

On motion of Senator Walsh of Montana the committee then instructed its sub-committee to proceed to a general investigation following the completion of the awards inquiry.

Senator Hale said that he expected to finish the present line of investigation within a week or ten days and then begin on the Sims charges, which all the committee members now regard as the really important task. The medals inquiry has lost much of its importance in view of the grave charges which Admiral Sims has made, and Democratic and Republican members alike are eager to go into the other phases of the affair.

The Democrats regard it as essential, they say, that Admiral Sims's statements be refuted as promptly as possible, as they expect them to be, while the Republicans say that the country should know without undue delay exactly how much ground Admiral Sims had for complaint, and what conditions in the Navy Department are.

It is likely, committee members say, that Secretary Daniels will be permitted by the committee to take the stand early. He may have to wait, however, until Admiral Sims has been questioned a little further, so that he may complete his statement, if he has anything to add to what he has already said.

One of the first matters to be gone into in the general investigation probably will be the establishing of the identity of the person in the Navy Department who, according to Admiral Sims, gave him verbal instructions just before he sailed for England in March, 1917, to the effect that he was not to let the British pull the wool over his eyes, and was not to pull their chestnuts out of the fire, because "we would as soon fight the British as the Germans."

Sims Tells of Foreign Honors.

Immediately after today's session of the full committee Admiral Sims was recalled for further testimony concerning medals. He told the subcommittee that he favored the abolition of all awards. He said that if any were to be given they should be distributed so sparingly that they would be highly prized, but to limit their distribution, he added, would raise another fine question, causing jealousies and criticism. The best thing to do, therefore, the Admiral declared, would be to do away with them altogether.

Admiral Sims was apparently in a facetious mood, for he kept the committee and spectators laughing during a good part of the hearing.

Referring to the prevalence of the custom of awarding medals in European naval and military establishments, Admiral Sims said that "you have to move fast over there to keep them from hanging one of those things on you." He said that an officer who tried to wear all the decorations he got in Europe would "show a heavy list to starboard" from the weight.

Senator Hale asked Admiral Sims what medals he received in Europe for his war service. After consultation with his aide he announced:

"I got the G. C. M. G."

"What is that?"

After further consultation, he replied: "The Grand Cross of St. Michael and St. George."

"What other decorations?" was asked.

"The Cross of the Legion of Honor and the Order of the Rising Sun."

"Any others?"

Emphasizes the Bagley Case.

Admiral Sims kept hammering on the Bagley case throughout the session as the most conspicuous instance of Secretary Daniels's alleged favoritism. Admiral Sims told the committee that even Bagley himself did not want a distinguished service medal, but asked only the same recognition given to other officers in similar circumstances.

To accommodate Bagley, the Admiral testified, Secretary Daniels wiped out century-old traditions of the navy and laid down a wholly new policy for honoring officers who failed in their mission and lost their ships. Secretary Daniels held that, owing to the changed conditions of modern warfare, officers should not be held strictly accountable for the loss of their ships and should be judged by their conduct under trying circumstances. All this was contained in a letter written some days ago by the Secretary to Senator Page, Chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee.

"If the sentiment expressed by the Secretary in that letter be maintained," said Admiral Sims, "they would soon undermine the efficiency of any military force in the world."

Trammell Resents Sims's Attitude.

Senator Trammell of Florida, a Democrat, took the Admiral sharply to task for his attitude toward the committee.

"He seems to be constantly reflecting upon the committee," Senator Trammell complained. "He appears to hold the committee in contempt. I resent his belittling the committee. I will not stand for insult after insult being heaped upon the committee without resenting it. Other members may, but I won't."

Senator Hale came to the Admiral's defense. He asked Senator Trammell to name specific instances where the Admiral had insulted the committee. Senator Trammell replied that it was not a case of specific instances but of general demeanor.

"Perhaps I have been testy," admitted Admiral Sims. "If I have been, I'm sorry. I did not mean to reflect on the committee."

Sims Under Mayo and Benson.

It was quite apparent from the attitude of Secretary Daniels at two conferences with the newspaper correspondents—this morning and again this afternoon—that he welcomed an investigation into the allegations made by Admiral Sims.

Mr. Daniels talked freely in his two interviews. He explained the relation of Admiral Sims, during the war, to the whole naval machine. Admiral Sims, he said, was on shore duty as commander of the American naval forces in European waters. Admiral Wilson, at first, directed naval operations in French waters, while Admiral Niblack directed operations in the Mediterranean.

Admiral Sims, Wilson, and Niblack, he explained, were all under Admiral Mayo, who was the ranking American naval officer on the high seas during the war. Admiral Mayo was not commander of the Atlantic fleet, but of the whole United States fleet. There was just one American officer who outranked Admiral Mayo during the war, and that was Admiral Benson, who, as chief of naval operations, was above every other officer and responsible to the Secretary of the Navy and to the President for naval policy and conduct.

Secretary Daniels was asked whether the naval tribunal which he had in mind for making an investigation would be the General Board of the Navy to which the Sims letter has already been referred. He replied in the negative, saying that that board was merely studying what Admiral Sims had to say about the "lessons of the war."

No Thought of Punishing Admiral.

He was also asked whether the General Board, as a result of its consideration of the Sims criticisms, would have the power to recommend that Admiral Sims be disciplined. Secretary Daniels replied in the negative to this also, saying that he had no such idea in mind when he asked the General Board to consider the Sims matter.

Commenting on Admiral Sims's allegations relative to delay or failure by the Navy Department to furnish him with ships for which he asked, Mr. Daniels said that if Admiral Sims, for example, should have asked for twenty-six destroyers and had received only sixteen of them, the question as to why the other ten were not furnished could be gone into by examining Admiral Benson and other naval officers or officials responsible for the decisions made and that this was a question upon which even eminent naval strategists might differ.

As to Admiral Sims's hint that it became necessary for him to appeal to Colonel House in order to obtain battleships or other vessels, Secretary Daniels asserted very positively that no request came from Colonel House for any naval ships. Mr. Daniels said that five battleships were sent over with Admiral Rodman, that another battleship was sent later to Rodman, and that another division of battleships had been sent afterward with Rear Admiral Thomas Rodgers to the bases at Beershaven to keep an eye open for fast German naval vessels that might try to elude the British Grand Fleet and rove the Atlantic in an attempt to cut our overseas troop and supplies communications.

The Secretary said that when the German submarines made their descent on the Atlantic Coast in the Summer of 1918 a hue and cry was raised in this country that these descents were possible because "everything had been sent to the other side." Mr. Daniels said that at that time he invited Senator Lodge and other members of the Congressional Naval Committees to the Navy Department so that Admiral Benson might explain confidentially to them what the Navy was doing to meet the submarine menace, and as to where the American naval vessels were being used.

Mr. Daniels recalled that when Mr. Lodge and these committee members returned to the Capitol they indicated, some of them in speeches, their satisfaction with Admiral Benson's arrangements as approved by the Department. He said that he had the greatest confidence in Admiral Benson's plans, that the people had great confidence in the Admiral's handling of the situation and that the allied naval leaders were also high in their praise of the work done by Benson.

"Nine times out of ten," said Secretary Daniels, "everything that Admiral Sims asked for was granted and the record, when disclosed, will show that. It was not always possible to send every officer that every other officer abroad asked for. Many times the officers requested were doing important work of such a character that they could not be spared."

Secretary Daniels' Interview.

Here is a stenographic transcript of the interview which Secretary Daniels gave to the newspaper correspondents this morning:

Press—Have you any idea when you will go before the Senate Committee?

Secretary—No. I understand the full committee will meet this committee. The sub-committee took the question of awards and medals, and now Rear Admiral Sims has read his letter on the "Lessons of the War," or whatever title he calls it by, and after it was read I understand it was decided to have the full committee. I have sent a letter to Senator Page. I would be glad to tell the committee anything in the world they want about naval operations or naval administration. There isn't anything about this Navy Department, about any awards that have been approved, or any orders that have been issued, or any action taken—indeed, there is nothing that we have—that isn't open to the light of day. Our record is one that we are very proud of, and I think the more people in America know what we did in the World War the prouder they will be of the record of their navy.

Press—This letter assumes, Mr. Secretary, that Admiral Sims is referring to you about the orders with reference to Great Britain.

Secretary—I never assumed anything of the sort. The letter touched upon things that might be internationally discussed, and a friend of mine, looking at questions from a diplomatic standpoint, said that inasmuch as I might not be called before the committee in the next few days, he thought it would be well for me to make the statement which is contained in the letter to Chairman Page. I never assumed that anybody supposed I had made any such statement, but this friend thought as it would be telegraphed all over the world, some people abroad might gain a wrong impression, and it would be wise for me to state promptly what instructions I had given Rear Admiral Sims.

Press—It is very apparent from what Admiral Sims said that he was referring to some conversation and in that he interpreted—

Secretary (interposing)—All I know about it is what I have just said.

Tells of Cautioning Sims.

Press—You said in your letter that you had spoken about his reprimand by President Taft.

Secretary—Yes. My letter to Senator Page states that fully. This conversation was the last part of March. We had broken off relations with Germany. We had not declared war, but it seemed imminent. We had begun to arm our merchant ships. Our Ambassador to Great Britain wrote to me that he thought the navy ought to have a man in Great Britain with the rank of Rear Admiral, who would keep in close touch with the submarine sinkings and study naval conditions. It was decided to send Rear Admiral Sims, and he went over on this confidential mission. He was cautioned by me that we were neutral, and he should not do or say anything that might commit this country until the President and Congress should declare the policy of the United States.

Press—Was there anything said about being ready to fight Great Britain?

Secretary—You have read my letter to Senator Page. It means exactly what it says.

Press—When Rear Admiral Sims went over, was it understood that he was to be commander in chief?

Secretary—No. Let's get that straight. Rear Admiral Sims was never commander in chief. His duties were ashore. Admiral Mayo was commander in chief of the Atlantic Fleet throughout the war. This includes ships on this side of the Atlantic as well as those overseas. Of course Admiral Benson, as chief of operations, was the ranking naval officer in charge of operations at home and abroad.

Press—The "in chief" doesn't belong there?

Secretary—No. Rear Admiral Sims was in June or July given the title of commander of the United States Naval forces operating in European waters, but as a matter of fact his duties were not afloat. The business of Rear Admiral Sims was to obey orders. His duties were to make recommendations, give us all the information, and all the facts, and then carry out instructions from the department.

The country and the world know already that the job of the navy was very well done. Whether on the 27th of June or the 27th of July, or some particular date, we should or should not have sent so many destroyers to certain places, or whether they could be made ready at that time, or whether it was important to retain some to protect our coasts, were, of course, matters of naval strategy. There may be differences of opinion between naval officers as to these matters, but there is nothing about this big job the navy did that I am not only willing but glad and happy for all the people in America to know. The officers and men in the navy yards and in private shipbuilding plants did a tremendously fine work. They pressed work day and night.

In 1915 we secured the three-year naval programme, the first great programme looking to a strong navy ever proposed or enacted.

I do not have any worry at all about what was done by the Navy during the World War. I do not mean to say we didn't always want the navy to do more than it was possible to do. There wasn't a minute during the war when we didn't do everything we possibly could to get every naval effort and add naval craft to fight submarines and protect our troops. We ordered 250 destroyers and there wasn't a minute during the war that work was not pressed to the full capacity of the country.

We wanted every ship in America that was fit for use. We utilized the navy yards, every private yard—everything was pressed almost to the breaking point to hasten things. All that, of course, is a matter of record and of fact.

Press: In what capacity did Rear Admiral Sims go abroad?

Secretary: Rear Admiral Sims did not go abroad in any capacity except the confidential capacity to study and report in which I sent him. I gave him very explicit instructions what to do and what not to do.

Press: And you are responsible for any instructions that were given him?

Secretary: Of course I am responsible for instructions given him.

Press: It is said Admiral Benson and another high naval officer were present when the instructions were given Admiral Sims.

Says Criticisms Must Be Backed.

Secretary: Others may have been present at some part of the interview. I do not desire now to take up all these different items and discuss them with you this morning. I could do this, but, of course, the first thing is that Rear Admiral Sims must be required to establish every criticism he has made of the department. This is perfectly satisfactory to me. If the Senate investigates, very well. If not, some other tribunal will take up the question of whether the navy did its full duty. That will be taken up. If the Senate does not undertake it, the department will see that a tribunal will do so.

I have been Secretary of the Navy now near seven years and I have never had any trouble at all since I have been here, but sometimes some Rear Admiral has broken out—I think about two, but I never had any controversy with the first one. But when the smoke blows away, I have no doubt that the public will see that naval administration has been efficient. I have no doubt about this.

I do not, of course, mean to convey that the navy was 100 per cent. efficient every day, but the truth is that all the things were done that were possible,

MARTENS INSISTS HE IS A RUSSIAN

LVOFF NATURALIZED HIM

Soviet Credentials Confirm His Citizenship, He Says, Though Naturalization Papers Were Lost.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The investigation into the activities of Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, "Soviet Ambassador," was begun today by the sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations. Little was accomplished other than to allow Martens to present his claims that he is a Russian and not a German citizen, and to tell the same story of his life which he related to the Lusk Committee in New York. The sub-committee then adjourned to meet again Wednesday.

The committee room was crowded with spectators and other curious ones stood in the hall trying to peer inside. The crowd, however, was unrewarded by sensations, for the atmosphere was at all times very calm.

Agents of the Department of Justice, who will arrest Martens when he completes his testimony, were in the audience. It is understood that the Department of Justice will allow him to tell his full story to the committee before he is taken into custody and held pending examination as to why he should not be deported.

During Martens's testimony he said he filed his credentials from "his government" with the State Department in March, 1918, and had sent several communications to the department since that time, but had never received any answers. He insisted that although born in Russia of German parentage, and forced to serve in the German Army two years as a private soldier, he had acquired Russian citizenship "from a former Russian Government"—that of Prince Lvoff—which was recognized by the Government of the United States."

He said he was unable to produce his Russian naturalization papers, as after being mailed to him by his sisters, Mrs. Popoff of Petrograd, I assume that the letter was intercepted in the mails by the British or other censor."

At the suggestion of Attorney Hardwick, Martens filed with the sub-committee documents which he said the British Government had issued to him in the first years of the war, allowing him to live in London, safe from internment, and to come to this country.

"The British Government," he said, "recognized that I was a Russian and that my German citizenship was technical."

"I am a Russian citizen," he said. "I ask to have inserted in the record a photographic copy of my credentials as representative in the United States of the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic. This certificate describes me as a Russian citizen." The original of this document I sent to the Department of State of the United States Government on March 19, 1919. Translated into English it reads as follows:

"Russian Socialist Federative Soviet Republic. People's Commissariat of Foreign Affairs, Office of the People's Commissar, January 2, 1919: No. 9 K. Moscow, Corner of Spiridonovka and Patriarch's Lane, House No. 30-1. Telephone No. 4-22-96.

"It is hereby announced that Russian Citizen Ludwig Christian Alexander Cariovitch Martens, who resides in the United States of America, is appointed the representative of the People's Commissariat of Foreign Affairs in the United States of America.

(Signed) PEOPLE'S COMMISAR FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS, G. TCHERIN.
ACTING SECRETARY OF THE OFFICE, F. SHENKIN.

Martens then produced a formal statement, which he read to the sub-committee. He claimed that each Government must be deemed the sole judge in determining the status of its citizenship, and therefore the naturalization accorded to him by the Lvov Government, and subsequently recognized by the present Soviet regime in Russia, should be recognised here.

He recounted that under the laws of the United States the American-born son of a German immigrant was a citizen of the United States. But under the archaic laws of the old Russian and German militaristic governments he was considered technically a German subject, although born and raised in Russia. At the age of 17 he applied for Russian citizenship, but the Russian authorities insisted that he should first serve in the German army, which he refused to do.

Was Imprisoned Two Years.

He continued to reside in Russia, and in 1896, by reason of his affiliation with the revolutionary movement against the Russian Czar, he was imprisoned by the Czar's Government. At the conclusion of his sentence in 1898, the Russian authorities delivered him forcibly to the German military authorities, who impressed him into the German army, and compelled him to serve two years as a common soldier.

On the establishment of the Russian Provisional Government on March 18, 1917, Russia proclaimed amnesty for all political offenders, and invited political refugees to return to Russia. Martens was in America at that time, representing the Demidoff Count San Donato Company of Perm, one of the largest steel and mining concerns in Russia. Because of his technical German citizenship, he could not avail himself of the amnesty and invitation to return, since Russia and Germany were then at war.

"Did you register as an alien enemy in the United States when this country entered the war?" asked Senator Moses.

"No, because I was then a Russian citizen," replied Martens.

"Was any effort made to get a copy of the naturalization papers you say were lost?" asked Senator Moses.

"No," answered Martens. "In August, 1917, relations were broken off, and in two and one-half years I have had no communication with my relatives."

Senator Moses also asked Martens whether he was employed by a Russian paper here, to which Martens replied no, but that he had contributed articles to the Novi Mir.

Wade H. Ellis, former Attorney General of Ohio, has been chosen counsel for the subcommittee, Senator Borah having opposed the proposal to employ counsel, but Senator Sutherland, with the remark that he didn't want the Lusk investigation transferred to the Senate.

SUGGESTS RADICAL COLONY.

Dr. Butler Would Herd Reds on a Philippine Island.

The action of the State Assembly in summarily suspending its five Socialist members was unwise, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, declared in an address before the Liberty Republican Club, at sixty-nine West 113th Street, last night. Though taken with the "highest motives and for patriotic reasons," it tended to weaken the force of the national assertion that all real ills in this country may be remedied by the people through the ballot box, he said.

"Common sense puts a limit on doctrines and indicates the point at which liberty passes into very dangerous license," said Dr. Butler. "There is really no human cure for some of the more extreme types of foolishness. These must be left to the slow working of the methods of Divine Providence. Instead of sending these intellectual and moral degenerates to Finland or to Russia, it might be worth while to select some one of the 3,000 Philippine Islands, where the climate is genial and the soil rich, and send them thither, with full opportunity and authority to try upon each other their social and economic theories."

FLOOD IN OFFICE BUILDING.

The sixteen floors of the American Exchange National Bank office building, at 85 Cedar Street, were flooded with water soon after fire started on the roof yesterday. A standpipe connection on the sixteenth floor broke under pressure as firemen were affixing hose, and about 6,000 gallons of water ran down stairways and elevator shafts.

The fire was extinguished in a few minutes, but the flood caused much damage. The damage by water was estimated at $36,000.

It is believed the standpipe connection had become rusty from nonuse and that such condition caused it to snap under pressure of water. John Meaghan, Dave Cronin, and Nick Saldon, elevator men, stuck to their posts running the firemen up and down the building. The water did little damage to offices except on the upper floors of the building.

INDICTS 15 FOR ANARCHY.

Grand Jury Passes on Lusk Committee Evidence at Buffalo.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 19.—Fifteen indictments charging criminal anarchy were returned by the Grand Jury here today from evidence secured by the Lusk Investigating Committee.

The report was not complete, and the District Attorney said that further indictments probably would be forthcoming.

CALL REDS' DEFEAT RUSSIA'S ONLY HOPE

EXPECT SOVIET OPPOSITION

Business Men Here Think America Should Lead Movement to Stabilize Russia.

The American-Russian Chamber of Commerce, representing a large number of influential American business firms, held a special meeting here yesterday, and through its Executive Committee, issued a statement regarding the action of the Supreme Council relative to the lifting of the Russian blockade. F. R. Bertrand of Bertrand & Griscom is Chairman of the Executive Committee.

The statement said, that, while the Council's announcement may have the effect of lifting the blockade, "unfortunately, the chances for it seem to be very slight." If the Bolsheviki think there is any likelihood of their opponents becoming strengthened by the move, they will not permit the co-operative societies to take part in the program, it was said.

The council's announcement, it was asserted, makes no important change in the policy toward Russia, and the Russian problem remains as before.

"We should not believe for a moment that the solution has been found," the statement continued. "There is and can be but one solution. That solution lies in the establishment of a legitimate form of government, stable and responsible, and as far as Russian conditions permit, representative of the interests and will of all the Russian people.

Overthrow of Soviet Urged.

"With this accomplished there will follow the restoration of Russia as a productive unit in the family of nations. She can never be supported from outside. Her restoration as a productive nation is essential to the prosperity of the world, including America. It can only be accomplished by the overthrow of the forces of destruction which now have her in their grip. The American people will some wake up to the fact that no economic stability in the world is possible until the forces of law, order, and property are restored in Russia, and that the present is no time to abate by one jot or tittle all efforts to bring about this consummation.

"There is today a life and death struggle between civilization and Bolshevism and in this struggle there can be no compromise.

"It is essential that we state clearly that there shall be no recognition of or collaboration with the destructive tyranny that rules in Moscow; that we stand for a unified, independent, and democratic Russia, and that we stand ready to co-operate with and extend aid to all the constructive elements of the Russian population in their struggle to free themselves from the grip of their oppressors and to reconstruct their national life and prosperity.

Believes America Should Lead.

"Further, we believe that America should take the leading part in such a definite and constructive program.

"The recent announcement of the Supreme Council at Paris regarding the removal of the so-called blockade of Russia has already led to considerable misunderstanding. It is important that the public should understand clearly how far a change of policy has been adopted and what may be expected from such a change.

"In the first place, there has been no change of policy on the part of the Entente Powers toward Soviet Russia which involves any change of principle. The only change is one of tactics. The announcement from Paris states in categorical terms that there will be no change in relations of the Powers to the Soviet Government. There will be no recognition of the Soviet Government, no direct dealings with it is proposed only to allow the exchange of goods between the Russian people and the outside world and this primarily through the agency of the Russian Co-operative Societies. * * *

Most Gold Is Rumania's.

"In the first place, the exporter may as well put out of his mind the much-advertised Bolshevik proposal to pay in gold. The Bolsheviki claim to have in their possession some $200,000,000 in gold. Of this $123,000,000 is the Rumanian gold reserve, removed to Moscow for safe keeping at the time of the German invasion of Rumania. This is a trust fund and no nation can countenance a diversion of it by the Bolshevik authorities. Whatever other gold they have was seized from the Russian Government and can only be used by them legally in direct dealings in which they are recognized as a de facto Government. The policy just announced does not contemplate such recognition of the Bolshevik Government, and, consequently, any merchant accepting this gold in payment for goods puts himself in the position of a receiver of stolen goods and subjects himself to litigation.

"In the second place, it is obviously impossible for any Russian organization situated in Russia to receive extensive credits at the present time. Consequently, the only means of payment consists in such raw materials as are accumulated at Russian points and which may be exported in exchange for manufactured goods imported. The quantity of such raw materials actually and commercially available has been greatly exaggerated. Experience in the southern part of Russia and in Siberia has shown that no such exchange of goods is possible on an extensive scale. Most people fail to realise the utter collapse of the transportation systems of Russia. It is not only impossible to get out any large supplies but the idea that food and clothing can be supplied adequate to make any impression on the suffering Russian population is an iridescent dream. For instance, to supply one pound a week per capita for distribution to the Russian population would require a shipping capacity of nearly five million tons, and if the quantity of supplies were delivered to Russian ports it would take at least five years, under present transportation facilities to get this quantity distributed throughout the interior."

LODGE TELLS OF SPIRITISM.

Deduces After-Death Existence from Material Evidences.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19.—Philadelphia greeted Sir Oliver Lodge, British scientist, tonight, at the Academy of Music, when he spoke on "The Question of the Reality of the Unseen."

The present wave of interest in spiritism was manifest in the throng that passed the doors. Standing room was at a premium.

For nearly an hour Sir Oliver spoke of things far apart from the spiritual world, of the stars and the vastness of space in contrast to the atom in its infinitesimal minuteness, things that existed even though they could not be seen.

On a foundation built of examples of realities of a material existence, Sir Oliver erected his beliefs in life after death, but the hope that the scientist would find some proof that there existed a communication between the spirit world and the living was disappointed. The question was barely touched. Sir Oliver devoting himself to pointing to his reasons for a belief in a spiritual hereafter.

"Those over the border are not far from us," Sir Oliver said. "We are all one family still, and I would say that the mothers of those lost in the war would realize that their boys are busy and happy with their jobs just as they were on earth. They do not want to be mourned or lamented. They are only separated by a veil. There is no gulf between us. The gulf is not between heaven and earth, but between heaven and hell. If there is a chasm at all between us, love bridges that chasm."

The second lecture in the extension course of the Catholic Summer School of America was given under the auspices of the Champlain Assembly Association of New York at the De La Salle Institute, 106 Central Park West, last night by Frederick Paulding. The subject of his lecture was "Booth Tarkington's, The Magnificent Ambersons." Dr. John J. Cronin, president of the association, announced that the next lecture, "How Great Wars Have Stirred Man to Great Achievements," would be given by Dr. James J. Walsh at the institute next Monday evening.

URGES $1,000,000 TO TEACH ALIENS

LUSK INQUIRY ADJOURNED

Anning S. Prall, President of the Board of Education, testifying yesterday before the Lusk Committee at City Hall, recommended that the State appropriate $1,000,000 for Americanization work in New York City and that the Board of Education be given more power to deal directly with school teachers charged with disloyalty.

"I do not think that New York City should be charged alone to bear the burden of the expense of Americanization work among foreigners, because the State and the nation are benefited by this work," he declared.

William McAndrews, Associate Superintendent of City Schools, was the first witness. He favored compulsory education for all foreign-born adults who do not seek enlightenment on American ideals and institutions. He said the State Legislatures ought to act in this matter, and urged the Lusk Committee to bring it up at Albany.

Superintendent William L. Ettinger did not agree with Mr. McAndrews, saying it was impossible to legislate citizenship into a human being as to legislate morals. He denounced "parlor Bolshevists."

"This type," he remarked, "infests young men's clubs, and, in some instances, settlement centres, and there they spread their views among youths of 15, 16, and 17 years of age who are impressionable and entirely too immature to think logically. I have no objection to boys attending meetings for the promotion of socialism, but I do believe that both sides of every question should be presented. If these 'parlor Bolsheviki' ever succeed, they will be afraid to look at the results of their own handiwork."

John L. Tildsley, Associate Superintendent of high schools, told the committee he thought the danger came not from the ignorant, but from the partly educated. He said particular stress on Americanization work should be placed on high schools. He urged that the course on civics, as taught in the high schools, be made compulsory throughout the State and country. George H. Chatfield, Assistant Director of the Bureau of Attendance, the last witness, testified along lines similar to Dr. Tildsley.

Department of Justice agents, assisted by Sergeant James F. Regan and others from the New York Bomb Squad, raided an apartment in East Sixteenth Street and a printing office in East Thirteenth Street, arresting eighteen persons on the charge of attempting to revive the Federation of Russian Workers. Although Peter Blanchi, the leader of the organization, alleged to be anarchistic, was ground enough to warrant deportation.

Twenty-eight alleged "Reds" were nearly hailed out at Ellis Island, but missed the last boat to Manhattan because of what Rose Weiss, attorney, described as "red tape." The twenty-eight will be released this morning and application made for bail for thirty others.

YARMOUTH REACHES PORT.

Steamship with $2,000,000 Whisky Cargo Is Safe in Lower Bay.

The Black Star Line steamship Yarmouth, which is manned entirely by negroes and loaded with whisky, said to be worth $2,000,000, arrived in the Lower Bay last night. She was picked up off the Virginia Capes on Sunday night in a disabled condition by the United States Coast Guard Seneca.

Colonel Daniel L. Porter, Supervising Internal Revenue Agent said yesterday that as the Yarmouth sailed from New York on Jan. 17 for Havana and her cargo of liquor had been cleared before the prohibition law became effective, the whisky would not be seized.

trade intercourse with the Allied peoples will, it is believed, have a greater effect in combating Bolshevist beliefs and tendencies than a prolonged estrangement could possibly have. If on the other hand, the Bolsheviki should put any obstacle in the way of a free exchange of the commodities they would almost certainly be faced with an immediate and violent uprising on the part of 25,000,000 members in the co-operative societies who would see in such an action the destruction of the last hope of the resumption of an open and ordered trade with the Western nations.

Thus, the Supreme Allied Council, in taking this new step, feel that they have sound political, as well as economic, justification for it.

Move Opposed by London Press.

The Chronicle editorially condemns the futility of the policy of compromise between peace and war which it sees in the decision to raise the Russian blockage. This decision, it says, is camouflaged by the pretense that the Supreme Council is dealing only with certain Russian co-operative organisations, and it proceeds to point out that the Bolsheviki possess such control over the railways, property and trade that any goods sent to Russia will go where the Bolsheviki like, the same being true of any goods which come out of Russia in return.

"We are to send clothing and boots into Russia," declared The Chronicle, "but we take no guarantees that the Bolsheviki will not make the obvious use of them, namely, directly or indirectly, to improve the clothing of the armies which are to March in the coming season against Poland or Lettland, Armenia or Mesopotamia. The allied powers must really make up their minds whether they are to be at war with Soviet Russia or at peace. There is no safe or satisfactory middle way between these elementary alternatives. * * *

"If we are to go on preventing Poland and Czechoslovakia, Lettland and Esthonia and Rumania from making their peace with Russia, we must stand by them and help to avert their invasion when the Leninist armies attack them in the Spring. If we are not prepared to do that we ought to let peace come, and if peace is to come, we ought without any delay to take the lead in making it ourselves. Only so can it come by an orderly, all around simultaneous treaty in which all the Allies, great and small, get their due, and not by a miserable scramble of successive capitulations which those who stand out last on the side of Western Europe get the worst terms."

The London Times, which gives prominence to quotations from THE NEW YORK TIMES editorial, "Peace by Surrender," declares in its leading article this morning that upon two points in the Supreme Council's decision to trade with the Russian co-operative societies agreement is general.

"Friends and foes of the Prime Minister," it says, "recognise it as his special handiwork, and all regard the statement that it leaves unchanged the attitude of the Allies toward the Bolshevist Government as a palpable and insolent untruth."

The London Times asks how trade with the Russian co-operatives is going to be conducted without leave of the Bolsheviki. "Will not negotiations for their permission, however these may be camouflaged, imply a change of attitude toward them?"

The Times concludes:

"We fear that home politics and regard for the supposed susceptibilities of 'advanced' labor now, as always, have had more to do with Lloyd George's attitude toward Russia than any sound views of national and imperial advantage or of national honor."

Trade Plan Originally America's.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The American Government is not a party to the decision of the Supreme Council at Paris to permit trading between co-operative societies of Soviet Russia and citizens of the Allied and neutral countries in Europe. The United States has no representative on the Supreme Council, but Ambassador Wallace, at Paris, who is sitting in as an observer, has advised Secretary Lansing of the decision that has been reached in the matter.

It was learned authoritatively today from a State Department source that the United States Government has not yet passed judgment on the plan and is not a party to it. It was learned also that the Government originally made such a proposal to the Allies some months ago, but that the project was at that time turned down.

There has been no change of the military aspect of the situation nor has the danger of a military invasion of Europe been eliminated, in the opinion of diplomats here, it developed by those in a position to understand the Russian situation that any extensive trade relations will be developed on a practical basis as a result of the proposal.

The feeling here is that before there can be any intercourse of real value with the Russians in Soviet Russia it must be preceded by a collapse of the Bolshevist military regime and accompanied by the initiation of an era of constructive activity, which is now prevented by the operations of the Bolshevist military forces.

LONDON BUSINESS SEES HOPE IN TRADE PLAN

But American Bankers There Doubt Reports of Vast Stores of Russian Products.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—In diplomatic and commercial circles here the scheme for an exchange of goods with the Russian co-operative societies was much more favorably received today, after consideration, than when the announcement was first made. It is candidly admitted that the first news of the decision came as a great surprise, attended by misgivings, but anxiety over the plan is diminishing as the situation is further canvassed.

There was an upward movement in virtually all the Russian securities quoted on the Stock Exchange today. Russian 5 per cent. bonds rose 4 points, 4½ per cents. improved 3 points, while 4 per cents. advanced 5 points. Mine and oil shares also appreciated considerably, but the movements were out of proportion to the business done. Holders, now seeing a possible return of some of their sunken capital, were just as anxious to retain their stocks as they were to sell them a few weeks ago.

Doubt as to What Reds Will Do.

One pertinent question being asked, however, is whether the Bolsheviki might not seize raw materials which it was intended to ship out, in which case the exporters would be forced to deal with the Reds, who might be unwilling to allow certain goods, which the Russian people are represented as needing sadly, to enter.

Those viewing the plan of exchange from a purely commercial angle see far-reaching possibilities in it. It is stated on good authority that even in the event of difficulties arising over attempts to stabilise exchange, merchants could without great inconvenience barter directly with the co-operative societies on the basis of the pound sterling, although no money or credit was employed.

This feature has long received consideration by the British Overseas Trade Department, which worked out an extensive plan dealing with South Russia when General Denikin was in control, but which has not yet been executed. British traders, nevertheless, have been able in the last few months to get several shiploads of supplies from Russia in exchange for manufactured articles.

The joint committee here of the Russian co-operative societies will leave for Paris tonight for a conference with the Allied Council's representatives to work out a plan for putting into operation the decision of the Council. The details of the transportation arrangements, the question of priority in imports and exports and the vexed problem of financing the transactions will be worked out in the consultations, which are expected to continue several days.

London is the main headquarters of the Russian co-operative movement, but several of the largest societies also have Paris branches. The committee which is going to Paris comprises representatives of four of the largest societies who are delegated to act on behalf of eight or ten smaller organizations.

American Bankers Skeptical.

The opinion of representatives of American banking corporations having Russian connections was not so sanguine. There seemingly was skepticism regarding the reports of the vastness of Russia's stores of produce which could be exchanged for American manufactures and also regarding the ease with which financial problems might be solved.

"It is going to be like the buying of Manhattan Island from the Indians," was the comment of a representative of a New York bank. "The only way we now see of taking advantage of the Paris decision is to load a boat with, say, clothing or machinery, and get the cargo into Russia and swap it for so much wheat or flax. This is the only way, unless the value of the ruble is bolstered through international backing. A drawback to this plan is the reluctance of many foreign traders to take a chance in Russian ventures. Many of them are disposed to accept the darkest pictures painted of the Russian situation. They are afraid that the warehouses in which their cargoes are stored might be razed overnight, while they were trying to effect an acceptable trade.

"It is difficult to reconcile the reports of the enormity of Russia's products which are awaiting export with the ever recurring reports of the prevalence of starvation in that country. Where are these thousands of tons of flax and other commodities? Agents of American banks who have been making inquiries investigation have been unable to get satisfactory information on this point.

"For these reasons we are inclined to believe that American traders will find England and France and some of the former enemy countries, all of which are urgently in need of American goods, more attractive markets."

DENIKIN'S NEW FRONT IS HOLDING FIRMLY

Caspian Fleet Defending Krasnovodsk—British Warships Sail for Black Sea.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Official dispatches from Persia report that the Bolsheviki still are outside Krasnovodsk, where they are under the fire of the Caspian Sea volunteer fleet, which is under the command of General Denikin, the anti-Bolshevist leader in South Russia. The dispatches assert that a further Red advance will be most difficult.

It is added that Denikin's position recently has become more stable, and that he is holding both the Don and the Sal. The total captures of Denikin's troops by the Reds are given as 35,000. The Reds are said still to be a considerable distance from Odessa.

Further successes for the Letts in another severe battle with the Bolsheviki on Saturday are reported by the Lettish Bureau here. The Letts forced the Reds to withdraw from nearly a dozen villages in the vicinity of Rezitza (capital of Letgalen).

A dispatch from Malta says that orders were received Thursday night for a number of naval vessels to leave there, apparently for the Black Sea. Vice-Admiral de Robeck sailed on Friday on board the battleship Iron Duke, accompanied by the destroyers Sergin and Steadfast and the steamer Minicus. Every other ship available was preparing to leave yesterday filled to its capacity with stores.

With regard to this dispatch the Admiralty today said it might be taken for granted that the ships in question were going to the Black Sea to protect British subjects and interests in case they were seriously threatened by the Bolshevist advance to the coast.

SWEET BLOCKS MOVE TO SEAT SOCIALISTS

ment he has violated all the high ideals to which he has given voice in his earlier remarks," said Mr. Amos.

"Looking for the spotlight again, eh?" sneered Cuvillier. "My friend Amos is not satisfied with basking in the spotlight six days a week, but is hunting it even on Sunday. Last night, speaking in a church in New York city, he characterized the Speaker of this House and the up-State members as a bunch of hayseeds."

Amos indignantly denied that he had used the language attributed to him, but admitted that he had said some harsh things about the action of the Assembly in throwing the Socialists out.

"And I was wildly applauded by some of the best men and women in the city," he added. Then it was the turn of the New York members to applaud.

Three Deportations May Be Asked.

Both sides were busy tonight making final preparations for the hearing. Attorney General Newton announced that he had added to the Judiciary Committee's counsel ex-Justice Arthur E. Sutherland of the Supreme Court and ex-Senator Elon R. Brown. They will cooperate with John B. Stanchfield and Martin W. Littleton of New York City, whose appointment has been announced by the Attorney General.

John B. Stanchfield and Martin W. Littleton spent practically all day in conference with Attorney General Newton, Speaker Sweet, Senator Clayton R. Lusk and Archibald E. Stevenson and Deputy Attorney General Samuel A. Berger of counsel for the Lusk Committee. They went over documentary evidence which was brought to the Capitol yesterday by troopers of the State constabulary and discussed procedure.

With Charles E. Hughes came the other members of the Bar Committee, Louis Marshall, Morgan J. O'Brien, Ogden L. Mills and Joseph M. Proskauer. The status of this committee still remains in doubt. Chairman Martin of the Judiciary Committee, who will have full power to admit or exclude it, declining to divulge what his ruling will be.

While great secrecy has been observed by Attorney General Newton and others who will appear against the Socialists regarding the evidence to be presented, it was reported tonight that the deportation of three of the five will be urged on the ground that they had obtained their citizenship papers under false pretenses. Two of this group were said to have been born in Russia and one in Switzerland.

One of the Judiciary Committee counsel asserted that Lusk Committee raids in New York revealed that these three had participated in activities in direct conflict with their oath of citizenship.

All the hotels in Albany are crowded tonight, and one hotel proprietor had to press into service one of the Albany night boats, in Winter quarters here, to take care of the overflow. The boat is heated and as brilliantly lighted as if she were about to start on a regular trip.

Hillquit States His Views.

Morris Hillquit, chief legal strategist for the Socialists, arrived here this evening, accompanied by his wife. He spent the last eighteen months at Saranac, seeking to regain his health. Others of the legal retinue of the defence to arrive were S. John Block, counsel for the Socialist Party in New York City; Gilbert E. Roe, a former law partner of United States Senator La Follette; ex-Assemblyman William Karlin; Assemblyman Charles Solomon of Kings and Samuel Orr of the Bronx. Two of the ousted five were in the Hillquit party. Seymour Stedman, who has figured in a number of I. W. W. trials in the West, will arrive from Chicago tomorrow to join the Socialist lawyers.

Mr. Hillquit was asked if, should the Bar Association Committee, headed by Charles E. Hughes, not be permitted to intervene in the proceedings, as a "friend of the court," it would become directly associated with the Socialist counsel.

"We shall do all that depends upon us to give the committee of the bar a standing and afford these gentlemen an opportunity to present their view of the case," he replied.

"What will you do if an attempt is made to bring extraneous matter into the case?"

"The Judiciary Committee, as I understand it, is the sole judge of its own procedure," he said. "The rules of the Supreme Court were adopted with a significant addition, vesting in the Chairman of the committee arbitrary power regarding the admission or exclusion of evidence. If the committee adheres to the rules of evidence provided by the Supreme Court, no such irrelevant matter as has been discussed in the newspapers for the last two weeks, for instance, can possibly be let in. Under these rules they would have to formulate charges and proceed directly within those charges.

"We will offer objection when evidence that we regard as irrelevant is introduced, as we would if trying a case in court. If we are arbitrarily overruled, we will be confronted with the alternative of either submitting to arbitrary ruling or else withdraw from the case."

"Are you expecting such a move?"

"Not by any means. We assume that everything will be done along lines of fairness and justice. But if we should be disappointed in this respect, there is our alternative."

Would Withdraw If Necessary.

"Would that mean that your five clients would walk out of the committee, as well as counsel?"

"That is precisely what it means. They cannot compel them to be defendants. We will not let the committee terrorize us. In the event that not even the forms of a fair trial are afforded, rather than make ourselves a party to a mock trial we will make our appeal at the bar of public opinion."

"It has been stated that there is an appeal from the Legislature."

"I will not admit that yet. If this was an ordinary case, growing out of a contested election or to determine the question of a member's constitutional qualifications, I should say that the Legislature was the sole judge. But there never has been a case, either in this or any other Legislature nor in Congress, presenting exactly the same issues. There never has been in our history a case of forcible expulsion of members without even the color of justice."

Mr. Hillquit said that the matter might be brought into court on a number of grounds.

"Suits might be brought for the salary of the five members, or action for assault might be brought against the Speaker or the Sergeant at Arms," he said. "There are a number of ways in which this case can be brought before the courts if we do not get a square deal here. And there might be a review in the Appellate Division and the Court of Appeals, or on constitutional questions in the United States Supreme Court?"

"In due time that will be done, of course. But I expect that there will be some argument on the constitutional questions involved before evidence is presented. However, that is not within our control. It remains for the Judiciary Committee to say what shall be done."

Mr. Hillquit said he had subpoenaed no witnesses.

"We have made arrangements with some persons to appear here as witnesses if they are needed," he added. "Who they are will depend largely upon developments."

Socialists Issue Statement.

In a statement made public soon after the arrival of Mr. Hillquit, the Socialists said:

"The great outpouring of protest against the autocratic action of a little clique of reactionist leaders in the Assembly, who assume to dictate to minority members what their political opinions shall be, and to dictate to the citizens of any political district whom they may or may not send to represent them, has been greatly encouraging to us.

"We well understand that it is not a matter of Socialism that is at stake at Albany, for the worst that could be done to us as individuals by the men who sit both as judges and prosecutors would only further the cause of the political party we represent. The issue at Albany is wholly one of Americanism and fundamental democracy. The question is whether a small group of politicians have the power to disfranchise 65,000 citizens in five Assembly Districts. If they succeed in this abuse of power the New York Legislature has ceased to function as an organ of representative government. If they establish this precedent, the day of political democracy as designed by the founders of our country, is ended in America.

"If the Socialist program—whether it is right or wrong—is a sinister thing to be outlawed in the State of New York, it is very curious that some hundreds of millions of citizens in other countries have adopted it.

"Against this background we hold that the charges of Sweet and company are absurd. In every country the Socialist Party differs somewhat in program and tactics, according to the native conditions. But fundamentally all Socialists seek a reorganisation of society on a basis of production and distribution for service rather than for private profit of absentee ownership and special privilege.

"We propose now, as we have proposed ever since the Socialist Party of America was organized, to bring about these necessary changes by due process of law, in spite of the current attempts of petty politicians to foment methods of force and violence among the citizens by seeking to dam the legitimate channels of political democracy and destroy representative government. It is plain that these politicians of the old school have no confidence in an appeal to reason when they seek to crush a political party by autocratic outlawry, secret frame-ups, and mendacious appeals to ignorance and hysteria."

600,000 REPRESENTED IN SOCIALIST PROTEST

Eighty civic and labor organizations, with a total membership of 600,000, will be represented today at the hearing of the Socialist Assemblymen in Albany. They are sending a committee of seventeen to aid the Socialists.

The organizations which have pledged help in the legal fight include the Central Federated Union, the American Labor Party of Greater New York, the Committee of Forty-eight, the League of Free Nations, the National Civil Liberties Bureau, the Woman's Trade Union League, and about fifty labor organizations. Many other bodies, including the City Club and the Citizens Union, have adopted resolutions condemning the suspension of the Socialists.

Subpoenas were served yesterday upon several persons identified with the Socialist movement in this city. They include former Alderman Algernon Lee, Charles Ervin, editor of The New York Call; J. Shatker of the Workers' Defense Union, Ann Stern of the Bronx Socialist organization, and George Goebel of the Socialist National Committee.

Socialist leaders, before their departure yesterday for Albany, made public a list of prominent public men and women who have protested the suspension. The list includes the following:

Senators Hiram Johnson, William E. Borah, France of Maryland, Sterling of South Dakota, Myers of Montana, Walsh of Montana, and Owen of Oklahoma.

Paul M. Warburg, James W. Gerard, Secretary of the Interior Lane, Charles H. Strong, Recording Secretary of the Bar Association; Colonel Arthur Woods, William G. McAdoo, Judge James A. Allen, Judge Samuel Seabury, John E. Milholland, Frank P. Walsh, Felix Frankfurter, Bernard M. Baruch, and Thomas L. Chadbourne.

Dean Joseph French Johnson of the New York University School of Commerce, Dean Hawkes of Columbia College, Professor John Erskine of Columbia, Professor Michael I. Pupin of Columbia, Professor Franklin H. Giddings of Columbia, Kenneth C. M. Sills, President of Bowdoin College, and Professor J. Salwyn Schapiro of City College.

Miss Ruth Morgan, Rose Schneiderman, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. George Haven Putnam, Harriot Stanton Blatch, Mrs. John Blair, Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw.

Edwin R. A. Seligman, R. Fulton Cutting, Robert Grier Monroe, Ralph Pulitzer, Judge Leon Sanders, Herbert S. Houston, Samuel Untermyer, J. A. H. Hopkins, Dudley Field Malone, Amos Pinchot, Captain Swinburne Hale, Lawson Purdy, Julius Henry Cohen.

Ellery Sedgwick, editor Atlantic Monthly; Herbert Croly, editor The New Republic; Hamilton Holt, editor The Independent; William Austin Smith, editor The Churchman; Walter Lippman, Edwin E. Slosson, Witter Bynner, Ernest Poole, Arthur Ruhl, Bernard Shaw, Dr. Norman Thomas, editor The World Tomorrow.

Among the New York City clergymen who have protested are the Rev. Hughell Fosbroke, Dean of the General Theological Seminary; the Rev. Arthur C. McGiffert of the Union Theological Seminary, Dean Robbins of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, the Rev. William H. Pott, Archdeacon of New York, the Revs. Harry Emerson Fosdick and George Alexander of the First Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Henry Sloane Coffin, Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church; the Rev. R. W. Sockman, Madison Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church; the Rev. Wolcott Cutler, Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church; the Rev. Henry E. Cobb, West End Collegiate Reformed Church; the Rev. Merle St. Croix Wright, the Rev. John H. Melish, the Rev. Charles H. Slattery, Grace Church; the Rev. Cornelius Woelfkin, Fifth Avenue Baptist Church; Dr. Henry Neuman, Brooklyn Society of Ethical Culture; the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, and Dr. Stephen S. Wise.

Detectives of the East 104th Street Station are investigating the theft of records from the Socialist Club of the Seventeenth Assembly District, from which August Claessens was elected by the Socialists to the Assembly. Dr. Karl Gottfried, Secretary of the club, said yesterday that he believed the robbery was the result of political fights in the district and that the occurrence had no connection with Claessen's suspension.

The records taken include membership rolls, records of proceedings, and some letters. Few of them were of recent date, Dr. Gottfried said. He added that they were of little importance either to the Socialists or to any one else.

It was said that the robbery might have some connection with a contest which followed the last Aldermanic election. The Socialist candidate, Edward Cassidy, was beaten by thirty-five votes. The Socialists charged fraud, and, according to Dr. Gottfried, obtained many affidavits in support of Cassidy's claim to election.

FOSDICK QUITS POST AS LEAGUE OFFICIAL

REGRETS TO LEAVE SERVICE

And Still Has Faith in League—Will Return Here to Practice Law.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (Associated Press).—Raymond B. Fosdick of New York, Under-Secretary General of the League of Nations, has resigned. Mr. Fosdick's friends say that as the League has not been accepted by the United States he did not feel that he could continue.

Mr. Fosdick announced his resignation in a cablegram to Sir Eric Drummond, Secretary General, in which he said:

"Now that the League of Nations is no longer a provisional organization, but has become established as a going concern, the continued lack of decision as to America's course places me personally in a position of peculiar embarrassment. In order, therefore, to avoid any confusion or misunderstanding as to my position as Under-Secretary General of the League, it seems best for me to tender my resignation. I do this with deep regret because I do not like to appear to be abandoning those with whom I have been associated for the last few months, just at the moment when their responsibilities and opportunities are becoming real.

"The League is now approaching the point where it can begin to carry out the world's hopes for disarmament, arbitration, the protection of backward people, the furthering of international health projects, and all the other humanitarian issues upon which we have been working for the last six months. I feel sure, however, that you will appreciate the reasons which have led up to my decision and will recognize that if, as an American, I now feel forced to withdraw from official connection with the secretariat, it is not for lack of faith in the League."

Fosdick, who is a lawyer, attracted attention during the term of Mayor Gaynor by the way in which he investigated the municipal finances. He was Chairman during the war of the Commission on Training Camp Activities, and was appointed Under-Secretary of the League of Nations by Sir Eric Drummond in May. He represented the League at the sessions of the International Labor Conference in Washington in November.

With Sir Eric and Jean Monet, French Under-Secretary General, he was a member of the cabinet of the League. He will return to the practice of law in New York.

SNOW DELAYS TRAFFIC HERE AND UP STATE

5,000 Workers Clear Street Here—Reports Tell of Trains Stormbound for 24 Hours.

The snowstorm of yesterday caused inconvenience to the railroads, and in some parts of the State practically placed an embargo on railroad traffic. The storm has raged intermittently since Friday, and it was reported yesterday that traffic had virtually been suspended on the Adirondack, St. Lawrence & Ontario Division of the New York Central Lines. On the main line between this city and Buffalo big snow plows were working constantly to keep the tracks clear. Even then it was necessary to divide some of the long trains into sections to bring them through.

Reports were received here of roundhouses and switches frozen up and of tracks buried under great drifts. Others that came through from points way up-State told of delays and of some passenger trains that had been snowbound for twenty-four hours stalled in huge drifts.

In this city the Street Cleaning Department called upon its reserve force for the work of snow removal. The department has been handicapped by the shortage of labor. The surface lines all had their sweepers running constantly to keep the tracks clear. The surface cars in the Bronx experienced great difficulty, especially on some stretches where the tracks were ice-covered. Along Southern Boulevard between Westchester Avenue and 163d Street ice on the tracks became so bad that traffic was delayed until sand cars could be sent out.

The Street Cleaning Department had 2,500 special laborers and 5,000 sweepers at work yesterday and last night. The officials in charge of snow removal said that 7,000 more men could have been used, but that none applied for work. There were fifty-seven motor plows at work.

The snow removal officials said last night that the situation was in hand and that the removal of the snow would be accomplished within a few hours. Motor and horse plows were used and the snow carted away in the carts of the department. No contractor's trucks were used in the work, as the scarcity of labor did not warrant the department bringing extra trucks into service.

Last evening officials of the department went to Fifty-seventh Street between Ninth and Tenth Avenues to witness the experimental use of a device that picks up the snow and conveys it to the trucks.

CHALLENGES WOOD TO OHIO CONTEST

vice of Mr. Daugherty, but I have assumed that no one can have greater concern than mine in this important selection. Mr. Daugherty's prominent part in party politics would give him a high place among available men, without any suggestions from me, but I particularly hope for his selection because I know his usefulness in presenting Ohio's claims to those who will constitute the National Convention.

"If there is need for further clarification of the situation in Ohio, I want to take this opportunity to touch on one other matter. There has been some discussion concerning Ohio's second choice, with the attending inference that the first choice is a merely perfunctory or complimentary thing to be recorded and thereafter proceed to the task of greater interest. I never could permit my name to go before a National convention with a merely perfunctory or complimentary support by the delegation from Ohio. If there is doubt about the real choice of Ohio, let us invoke the real preference by an expression of the Republican voters at the primary polls. In that frankness which becomes the importance of the undertaking, let it be understood that I do not wish a delegation favorable to me unless my candidacy is the genuine and cordial preference of Ohio Republicans, and I could permit no endeavors in my behalf at the convention if there is mere perfunctory support.

"I will welcome an expression in a preferential ballot and will accept the result in such a way as to join Ohio's endeavors in making Ohio's influence effective when we meet the Republicans of the whole country in the National Convention. I am sure this spirit and the purpose cannot be misunderstood."

Senator Moses, New Hampshire, General Wood's campaign manager for Washington, in a statement announcing the opening of Wood headquarters here said that sentiment for the General was growing rapidly.

"The announcement of the Hon. Elihu Root and of Governor Burnquist of Minnesota in support of the candidacy of General Wood, and the fact that the first two delegates to the National Convention chosen by Oklahoma have been instructed for the soldier-administrator make the opening of the Washington headquarters an auspicious one," said Senator Moses. "Reports from all sections of the country indicate plainly that the Wood movement is gathering momentum daily. The Wood sentiment in the South has grown so great as to be exceedingly disquieting to the Bourbon Democracy. The headquarters at Washington will co-operate with and supplement the work of those in New York and Chicago. A list of big Americans identified with the Wood-for-President campaign will be made public later."

Senator Edge, of New Jersey, sent a letter to General Leonard Wood today, asking him to state whether he, as a reported candidate for the Republican nomination for President, favors Government operation of the American merchant marine, or private operation with Government regulation.

Senator Edge stated that his letter was prompted in part by a published quotation from General Wood's speech on the navy and merchant marine, in which he said he favored a large merchant fleet. Pointing out that the United States had a $3,000,000,000 fleet of merchantment, Senator Edge asserted that he, as a member of the Senate Committee, charged with framing legislation for a permanent policy for the merchant ships, is interested to know how General Wood, as an aspirant to the general management of the country's affairs, would run the ships.

WOOD DENIES VERSION OF SPEECH ON THE NAVY

General Says He Referred to the Danger of Filling Ships with Untrained Crews.

BOSTON, Jan. 19.—Major Gen. Leonard Wood denied tonight that he had referred to the American Navy as "a floating death trap" in his address at the American Legion meeting in this city yesterday. He said that he could not recall the exact words he had used, but dictated the following as the substance of what he had said:

"We want a first-class navy always ready. A navy cannot be made in a hurry. First-class ships filled with untrained men do not mean a navy but are sometimes a death trap to those who are in them."

General Wood arrived here from Portland early this evening and a few hours later took a train for New York, whence he will go to Chicago.

The press report of his speech in the Old South Meeting House on Sunday was based on what purported to be a stenographic copy of his remarks. An examination today of the stenographer's notes shows that he reported the General as saying:

"I do not think we want a large regular army. I am very much opposed to it. We only want a large enough army to police the nation in times of peace. We need a navy. All we have now is not a navy; it is a floating death trap. We want a good navy with highly trained men and good ships. They are a very active force for peace.

"We want to build up a good merchant marine. We want this merchant marine for our commerce and for our navy. Back of all that comes the big military force of the nation which means the people of the nation."

General Wood spoke extemporaneously, and at times rapidly, touching briefly on a number of national questions. When he saw the version of his remarks published today he took the first opportunity to explain that he had been misquoted.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Representative Thomas S. Butler, Chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, basing his decision on the early version of General Wood's speech in Boston, said today that the General would be asked to appear before the committee and support his view. Mr. Butler attempted to reach General Wood today, but found that he was on a train between New York and Chicago.

"As soon as we can reach him General Wood will be subpoenaed," said Mr. Butler. "Such charges cannot be allowed to go unanswered. If General Wood said what he is reported to have said in reference to the Navy, he has stated an untruth."

SAYS WOOD STANDS BY LODGE.

Publicity Manager Explains Why General Made No Reply to Borah.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 19.—General Wood had no comment to make on Senator Borah's letter up to the time of leaving Boston tonight for Chicago, but Frederick Moore, Major Gen. Wood's publicity manager, intimated tonight that Wood would break his silence regarding the Borah letter before the week is out.

According to Mr. Moore, Wood feels that it is well known that he is with Senator Lodge in "making the treaty safe for America and American institutions" before ratifying it.

EMPORIA, Kan., Jan. 19.—General Wood led a flock of Presidential candidates in a straw vote taken by students of the Kansas State Normal School. Wood received 74 votes out of 256 cast. Governor Henry Allen was second, with a total of 49 votes. The Democratic candidates received little support. McAdoo was given 34 votes, Wodrow Wilson 17, and Bryan 5.

TRIED TO MASSACRE AMERICAN COLONY

SAVED BY BRITISH CONSUL

Special to The New York Times.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Jan. 19.—The Senate committee which is investigating the Mexican situation heard today the story of the exodus in 1914 of the Americans from the city of Guadalajara and surrounding district in Mexico. It was testified that but for the protection afforded these people by Percy Holmes, then the British Consul at Guadalajara, every one of the Americans probably would have been slaughtered.

The American Consulate had been looted and sacked, the United States Consul had been marked for death, and thousands of excited Mexicans were parading the streets demanding vengeance on the Americans.

The witness who told the story was Dr. John Hunter, for ten years the resident physician employed by various American mining companies in the Guadalajara country.

Dr. Hunter also told of a battle in which four American mining men held off for hours a Mexican rebel force of more than 300 men, who, he added, fought under the red flag. He told of the murder of Americans, the outraging of innocent women, and of the theft of practically everything owned by Americans in that part of Mexico where he had made his home.

Dr. Hunter said that during his ten years' residence in Mexico he had never known of a Mexican being punished for killing an American. "There has been no safety for American life or property in Mexico since 1910," he said, adding: "I have yet to see the first Mexican—and I know Carranza—whose oath I would accept."

Says Carranza's Nephew a Bandit.

Another witness was G. E. Delamain, a British subject, who for more than twenty years was a ranchman in the State of Coahuila. Mr. Delamain said that he and his American neighbors were robbed of all they had and he made the statement that the band which did most of the thieving was led by Sebastian Carranza, a nephew of President Carranza.

He told the story of the murder of an American family named Hilicote, and of his own kidnapping by Mexican soldiers. Mr. Delamain was held prisoner for ten days and was not released until his family paid the bandits $2,000 in gold. The band that murdered Mr. and Mrs. Hilicote and their two children was led by Major Castillo, then an officer in the Carranza army. His own kidnappers were also, added Mr. Delamain, men from Castillo's command. Castillo was subsequently killed by his own men.

Another witness today was Dr. O. M. Jackson, a full-blooded Cherokee Indian, who settled in Tamaulipas and was, because of his American citizenship, subjected to all sorts of indignities, on one occasion being arrested, court-martialed and sentenced to death. He was kept in Mexico to treat the sick and wounded bandits. Three months later Dr. Jackson escaped, reached Tampico and came home. This happened in the latter part of 1918.

Mr. Delamain was the first witness. He said that he came to Mexico from New Zealand in 1891 and rented a ranch in the State of Coahuila from General Trevino of Monterey. "My place was raided the first time," said Mr. Delamain, "in 1911 by Mexican soldiers of General Caballero's command. All my other losses have been at the hands of Carranzistas, the leader of the band that did most of the raiding, so far as I was concerned, being Sebastian Carranza, who is a nephew of the President."

Delamain also said that an American named Patrick Malone had been captured and held prisoner until ransomed by friends. He also told of the raiding of the Tierrablanca ranch, which is owned by Americans.

The next witness, W. E. Frazier, an American farmer who in 1903 settled in Tamaulipas, said he did not go to Mexico until he was given assurances by the American and Mexican Governments that it was safe to go. He bought a small ranch and also opened a general merchandise store, and for the first six years was successful.

"Then my troubles began," he said. "It was on our ranch that the Americans, William Brooks and Timothy Brandon, were murdered by Mexicans. The story of the torturing and killing of Mr. Brooks was told by Mr. Bialock, so far as I know, nothing came to either of the cases, so far as justice is concerned. In the case of Mr. Brooks the murderers were sentenced to serve as private soldiers in Carranza's army.

"I remained in Mexico as long as I could. When law and order ceased to prevail I left behind me all I had and came out."

Attacked 245 Americans.

Dr. Hunter, who followed Mr. Frazier, told of the rescue by Mr. Holmes, British Consul at Guadalajara, of 245 Americans whose lives were demanded by a mob in 1914. The American Consulate was attacked, and the American Consul powerless to interfere, he said.

The mob dragged the American flag about the streets, trampled it under foot, tore it into strips, and finally burned it, throwing the ashes through the windows of a special train which Mr. Holmes had obtained to take the Americans to Manzanillo. From this Pacific Coast port the American refugees were taken aboard the German steamship Magie to California.

Dr. Hunter told of an effort in 1914 to dynamite the home of an American engineer named Kelly, who was employed by a mining company in Jalisco. The battle between four Americans and 300 bandits, in which the latter fought under the Red flag, also occurred in Jalisco.

"The bandits came," said Dr. Hunter, "in companies of about twenty men each. The officer leading the first company carried the red flag, which was about four feet square. In this fight the Americans were finally overwhelmed, but not until two of them, one Dr. Beard, superintendent of the mines, had been stabbed many times with stilettoes. Both recovered after a long illness."

In Guadalajara in 1914, Dr. Hunter said, the Mexicans had planned to start the massacre of the American colony by first murdering Mr. Keith, then owner of the largest American store in that city. Mr. Keith was rescued just in time by the British Consul. During the railway trip to Manzanillo, Mexican officers went through the train and compelled the Americans to give up their money, watches, and other personal effects for safe keeping. None of the property was restored, and when the 245 men, women and children boarded the German steamer Marie they were all penniless.

Dr. Hunter testified that a gruesome practice has grown up in parts of West Mexico. This is to hang men not by the necks but by putting ropes under their arms and then suspending them in the air from the limbs of trees. The feet of the victims are then cut off and the victim shot to death. On one occasion Dr. Hunter said he saw the dead bodies of three men who had been mutilated in this savage fashion.

Dr. Hunter told of the kidnapping and outraging of a girl named Flocks. This girl, he said, was taken into the mountains, and was never seen again by any of her friends.

Another American murdered was a man named Breckinridge, from Texas. Dr. Jackson, in telling of his capture and court-martial, and of being sentenced to death by the Mexicans, said the feature of the court-martial proceedings which most impressed him was the refusal of the court, as they called it, to permit him to call a single witness in his own defense.

Dr. Jackson corroborated the testimony given by George W. Bialock last Wednesday regarding the murder of five Americans of the Chamal colony. G. E. Ward also corroborated Mr. Bialock's testimony.

It was announced today that Señor Le La Mata, the Mexican Consul in San Antonio, had been instructed by his Government to warn Mexican citizens not to appear as witnesses before the Fall committee. All such Mexicans, it was added, will be considered traitors to Mexico.

Knocks at the Doors of

TWO MEN

An advertising agency, young and fast-growing, whose main office is located in a city near New York, offers exceptional opportunities to men who can measure up to the requirements of two positions open in its organization.

Position Number One—requires a man with a record of achievement, qualified to take charge of our representation. He would direct the work of business development, being placed in charge of sales, and to a certain degree supervise our relations with clients.

Almost certainly the man we want is now in an advertising agency. Perhaps he is already director of sales and service, but finds the possibilities of advancement limited by the nature of the organization he is connected with. Or he may have proven his right to such a position, but has never been given his chance. He is probably more than thirty and less than forty-five years of age, although he may be older or younger, yet suitable for the job if he has the experience and other qualifications. He must have the ability to direct other men and handle big affairs himself.

Position Number Two—requires a man qualified to meet big men, assume the burden of service work and act as assistant to the Manager of the New York Division of this agency. He must have sufficient experience and the necessary ability to enable him to analyze merchandising problems and apply advertising to their solution. This man will be a potential sales and service executive, who can eventually do for the New York Division the things required of the man we are looking for to fill Position Number One.

THE BONDS AND WHAT THEY BOUGHT.

Several accounts of Mr. VANDERLIP's address before the Political Education League agree in making him say that the result of the Liberty Loan campaigns had been not to create 21,000,000 investors where there had been 400,000, but to make 21,000,000 people disgusted with their investment, because they had "lost money—every one." From more than one source of opinion the public was told what it had scantiest excuse for not knowing without telling—that the Liberty Loans would be worth par at their issue and their redemption, and that between times they would be worth neither more nor less than what such a prime promise to pay dollars at a future time might be worth. The public, therefore, has no reason for even surprise that the Liberties are at a discount. If any bondholders are "disgusted" at the discount on what they paid par for, then they are poor judges of their bargain, for the bonds at their discount are a better security with Germany whipped than they would be with the bonds at par and Germany in the field. Looking back to the time when victory was in doubt only relieved by the flotation of the Liberties, it would have been rash to say that the war could be won with a discount so small as today's.

The remark is addressed to the bondholders who are said to be dissatisfied with their bonds, not to Mr. VANDERLIP. He speaks with the authority earned by the accuracy and earliness of his foresight and by the present hopeful view of the future which he takes. While others think that our credits are exhausted, even trained, he estimates that there is present capacity of enlarging our Federal Reserve deposits by four billions. Needless to say, he thinks that inflation should be checked and decreased in every prudent way, rather than to expand credits and invite a crisis as the remedy. There is agreement that the present is a time to discriminate in credits, favoring those used for production and distribution and disfavoring those used to check consumption by holding goods off the market or making them dearer than they otherwise would be. Not until that fails would it be prudent or wise to use pressure to promote deflation by disturbance of investment values. This must be taken to be the interpretation of Mr. VANDERLIP's views as now a merchant banker, rather than as a banker using funds obtained under a public franchise. And no doubt, too, that is the explanation of the reason why he, a former Treasury official, chooses just now to express his regret that the Treasury is associated with present attempts to establish the primacy of the Federal Reserve over the Clearing Houses as regulator of money rates. He calls that connection an example of "political banking," and blames it for the disgust of every holder of Liberty bonds.

Nobody likes political banking in peace, but there is explanation and extenuation of it in this country in the existence of our Sub-Treasury system. Political banking in war is almost unavoidable. Governments and banks then come together which normally are further apart than ours. Considering the conditions, it may be doubted that the Liberty Loans could have been floated without co-operation between the Treasury and the banks. If it was closer and more brilliant here than elsewhere, it may have been because it was official and systematic, rather than occasional and extemporized. The Liberty Loans may be criticised after their success without harm, but it is at least as timely and useful now to say that they will ever be a source of pride to all concerned and of justified disgust to none. It is more important that Mr. VANDERLIP lends his prestige to prudent deflation as the best corrective to the social injustice in the excessive rewards of some, and the burdens on the life of others, by the price disturbances due to war conditions rather than to any of the economic conditions characteristic of capitalism.

TWO IDEAS.

Landing from the Soviet Ark, Mr. ALEXANDER BERKMAN and Miss EMMA GOLDMAN, most illustrious in that passenger list, shook their fists at the country which they were at last compelled to leave for its good. Mr. BERKMAN declared that his deportation "was unfair and stupid. You can't kill an idea like that. The Czar tried and failed. He is dead and forgotten." "An idea like that" is Bolshevism of one brand or another. Whether it is government by the minority and the proletariat, the substitution for Romanoff autocracy of an autocracy infinitely more savage, tyrannical, and subversive of liberty and equality, or whether it is some form of anarchism or communism, that is what the Bolsheviki who have left us, the too numerous Bolsheviki who remain, have been trying to teach. It will take a good while for them and their like to accomplish much in this country. Dissatisfaction, a tendency to disturbance among some aliens or among some natives mentally instable, is the most that they have done or can do here for a long time, aside from such violence as they may stir up or take part in. The vast mass of Americans of foreign birth or parentage are quite beyond the reach of their appeals.

For the majority of Americans have an idea also—an idea not easily to be dislodged. They believe in and practice government by the majority, representative self-government, justice, equality, protection for the rights of the citizen and the rights of property, ordered freedom under the Constitution and the laws. They have been trained in political self-control, insistence upon the rights of others, insistence upon their own. Their political education goes back for centuries. The Bill of Rights in their Federal Constitution and in their State Constitutions goes back to Magna Charta. All the great statutes and documents of advancing freedom in English history are their tradition and inheritance. The Americans had a long experience in self-government as colonists. They were prepared for independence and State Government when it came. In the one hundred and thirty years of the United States its forms of government have broadened, become more democratic, been changed or interpreted to correspond with the social, economic, and intellectual progress of the people. The people of forty-eight States can adapt their fundamental law and the acts of their Legislatures to their own particular needs or opinions, subject to the Federal Constitution; and this, like them, can be easily, perhaps too easily, altered. Thus forty-eight nations and one nation enjoy in permanence the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. To all are guaranteed the rights, here deemed essential, that in the blessed climes of Bolshevia are denied save to the fanatical autocrats of the minority and oppressors of the majority. There is nothing rigid or iron about our form of government. Its mechanism is elastic. It can be made, and has been made, to suit the needs and desires of each generation.

Such is the American idea. It will be overthrown when the people choose. The Bolshevist missionaries will be a long time in overthrowing it.

WHO WAS THE MAN?

In the memorial addressed to Secretary DANIELS which Admiral SIMS read to the Senate Naval Affairs subcommittee on Saturday he stated that before leaving for his post in London in the end of March, 1917, he received the following "explicit" admonition: "Don't let the British pull the wool over your eyes. It is none of our business pulling their chestnuts out of the fire. We would as soon fight the British as the Germans." When Admiral SIMS declares that this instruction was "explicit," he plainly means that it was intended to be serious and that he was expected to take it seriously. It was no occasion for jocularity, and it was a dangerous time to be flippant about our association with a nation with which the United States would inevitably and in a very short time make common cause in warring upon the Central Powers.

There was no doubt in the minds of loyal men that war with Germany was inescapable, and on account of the atrocities committed by her upon Americans at sea must be declared. Ruthless submarine warfare upon all shipping "in a zone around Great Britain, France, Italy, and in the eastern Mediterranean" had been ordered on Feb. 1. Neutral vessels were not to be respected. On Feb. 27 the liner Laconia had been torpedoed without warning and two American women had died from exposure in a boat upon the open sea. By March 19 seventy-two neutral ships had been sunk, according to an official announcement made at Berlin. Among them were the American ships Illinois, City of Memphis, and Vigilancia. The Vigilancia had the American flag painted upon her sides, and her hailing port, New York, was marked in letters five feet high upon her port and starboard bows. Fifteen of her crew were lost. The American ship Algonquin was also torpedoed without warning and was sunk with shellfire and bombs. Provoked beyond the limit of endurance by wanton destruction of their ships, by cold-blooded atrocities, and insults to their flag, the American people desired war with the Central Powers.

Such was the condition when Admiral SIMS was sent to London to consult with the British Admiralty in the end of March, 1917, with a view to naval co-operation in the event of a declaration of war by Congress, which seemed to be only a question of days. That any official connected with the Navy Department and in a position to give him instructions was so base as to admonish him of the need of wariness and suspicion in his communications with the British, who up to that time had been fighting our fight as well as their own, and to tell the Admiral that "we would as soon fight the British as the Germans," would be incredible if he had not declared it to be a fact upon his personal responsibility in a report to Secretary DANIELS which the Admiral himself read to a Senate Committee. Such an official deserves exposure, and there should be no false delicacy about disclosing his name. If he is still connected with the navy, actively or on the retired list, an example should be made of him. Nothing less would fit the case of sinister impropriety charged by Admiral SIMS.

FROM WAR TO PEACE.

The strength of the sentiment for peace with the Bolsheviki is evident in the dispatches from England telling not only of the joy in labor and Socialist circles, but of the enthusiasm of business men who have long been waiting, as have business men of every country, for a chance to start trading again with Russia. Enthusiasm is all well enough, and it would be unkind to recall that we were all enthusiastic about another peace only a little more than a year ago.

The British radical press is indignant at Mr. WINSTON CHURCHILL and his subordinates at the War Office for telling the nation, last Thursday, of the danger hanging over India from the recent Bolshevist victories. According to some of these papers, the War Office gave out an "undignified" statement, after which the War Minister and the heads of the army and navy, hoping that they had roused the nation by ringing the alarm bell, rushed off to Paris to head off the Premier's intended move toward peace. They arrived too late. Mr. LLOYD GEORGE had already acted. America is out of the Supreme Council because of the President's illness and the Senate's delay in acting upon the Treaty; and, though some of our officials at last seemed to be awakening to the Bolshevist danger, they could do nothing. Mr. NITTI had to be neutral; while his own Socialists could prevent him from taking any prominent part in an aggressive action against LENIN, Italy could not afford to break away from her allies. Italy and America both were in such a position that they, like the smaller States, had to acquiesce in the decision of England and France. Mr. LLOYD GEORGE had only to persuade the French; and Mr. CLEMENCEAU, drawing his own conclusions from the result of the Presidential caucus, eventually allowed his British colleague to have his way. So the policy of some twenty nations is decided by a single man—the delegation of Admirals, Generals and War Office dignitaries having arrived an hour after the decision was made.

The British War Office statement on the danger to India may have been undignified but was undeniably true; its critics dislike it for both reasons. Nevertheless, the alarm bell does not seem to have aroused more of the British nation than was awake already; and, though British warships are going from the Mediterranean into the Black Sea, their movements can hardly interfere with the progress of this new policy. We are assured that we are going to have peace. And, as Mr. HENDERSON points out, if you are going to have peace, it must be an all-round peace. The Poles hold much territory east of the line assigned to them by the Peace Conference. So long as they were at war with Russia they needed this strategic foothold; but if England and France make peace and open trade with the Bolsheviki Poland must do the same. In that case the Polish troops must retire, either to the boundary set by the Conference or to some compromise line which can be established in a formal treaty with LENIN. Mr. HENDERSON says they must do this, otherwise the Bolsheviki may attack the Poles in a crusade to recover Russian territory, and England may be called on by some "commitment of honor" to save the Polish Army.

The conclusion is sound, though the premises are bad. As the Supreme Council has realised, the Poles must retire and peace must be made, not for fear that they will be beaten and the Allies will have to support them, but for fear lest they be beaten and the Allies will not support them. Education may sometimes be bought at too great a price, and we hope that Mr. LLOYD GEORGE and Mr. HENDERSON may have no occasion to learn what is already fairly obvious to some people, that the loss of Poland might be a greater disaster for England and the world than the loss of India.

GOVERNMENT OPERATION PROFITS.

The Director General last week revised his statement of the railways' profit under Government operation. In the last pre-war year the freight rate average per ton per mile was .723 of a cent. For the nine months ended with September it was .967 of a cent. The increase of rate was a third, and the total of business and income was satisfactory, more so to the overworked railways than to their unsatisfied shippers. The fact that there was no entry on the credit side after the bills were paid is too familiar for repetition, and is referred to only for the sake of the Director General's excellent reasons why the more the roads earn the more they lose. The railways, unlike other public utilities, have been allowed to increase their rates, but not in proportion to other increases. Food prices, for example, have risen 80 per cent. while railway rates were rising 33 per cent. How can anybody be so unreasonable as to expect that the railways should have anything left after they paid their bills?

The taxpayers have become so wise over railway profits—and losses—that they learn with alarm that the gross profit now paid to the Shipping Board by its operators is at the rate of $100,000,000 or more a year. What is that to withstand the assault of amortization, depreciation, and overhead? An ordinary business which was making net earnings equal to depreciation would not think itself getting ahead until it was relieved of anxiety about the final disposition of millions of tons of ships built and building at a cost of $210 a ton, while private concerns are now building at from $165 to $185. That is more properly a debit against the war costs than against Government operation or construction, but the bill is the same in either case. If the ships are not put to work they will eat their heads off, and there is increasing difficulty in finding operators on the Government terms. The offer to allocate ships to some 170 operators expired on the 15th; nearly a score failed to file satisfactory bonds.

There is no criticism of anybody, certainly no excess of criticism, in the mere statement of the fact that the Shipping Board has had the use of $3,500,000,000, and has spent half of it in plans to do a gross business of about a billion, it is estimated. The enterprise is now at a stage where it is difficult to decide whether to advance or to retreat, and how to do either in a manner beneficial to the taxpayers.

These two notable examples of how Government operation is successful in undertakings so great that private capital cannot be procured, and yet which must be done regardless of cost, would have a value worth their cost if they silenced the contentions of those who would wish to see Government operation a permanency. But even that consolation is denied. In that respect the record is wasted. Facts and experience alike are defied in the contention that Government operation is necessary to social welfare, and that it is all the same whether profits are made on commercial considerations, or whether arguments as good as gold are used to balance the profit and loss statement.

VINDICATION OF EVE.

Many of us felt, even before the rise and triumph of feminism, a great sympathy for EVE. In collateral, if unrelated, accounts of other Gardens of Eden, naïve or sophisticated explanations, all over the world, of the origin of evil and death, one finds forbidden trees and fruits; but why should a woman be credited anywhere with bringing sin into the world and all our woe? We are speaking merely of myths, legends, folk stories of primitive races, past or contemporary; but even many reverent readers of the Bible must have regretted the weakness and irresponsibility shown by the grand old gardener in hiding behind his wife. There, speaking without irreverence, began the false and famous direction, "Cherchez la femme." It smacks of an Eastern, of a savage, contempt for woman. It has been harped upon endlessly by long generations of theologians. Woman, we have been told, is the evil of evils, the beginnings of evils, the danger of dangers. So the now dethroned lord of creation has magnified his minimitude and proved to himself how naturally good he was until the woman tempted him and he did eat.

From the famous Babylonian tablets in the Museum of the University of Pennsylvania comes a contradiction of the masculine theory so far as our vanished but unforgotten friends, the Sumerians, dwellers in lower Babylonia in the dark backward and abysm of time, are concerned. A flood tale of theirs shows that NOAH ate the forbidden fruit after landing from the Ark. He was saved from the deluge by one of the goddesses so active in ancient Babylonia. Mother EVE is not in the story. This is a discovery singularly apt and contemporary. It implies that among the Sumerians also NOAH or PARNAPISHTIM, or whatever he was called by them, was the jovial inventor of the forbidden juice. Whether the forbidden fruit was an apple, mother of the accursed cider, or a grape, the name of NOAH is just now peculiarly adapted to the feelings of a highly moral community, dragging behind it cheerfully the Anti-Saloon League's ball and chain. It was natural that NOAH as a sailor should have the marine propensity to the cup that cheers. A modern legend, delightfully told in a German students' song, shows us the LORD on the earth, accompanied with an angel. They see the good old NOAH, then only about six hundred. "What shall I do for the good old man?" says the LORD. The good old man is asked what boon he craves. Well, at his time of life he really feels the need of something warming. Water he cannot abide because so many sinners have been drowned in it. Therefore the gift of the grape is bestowed upon him, and he lives in entire health and happiness for three hundred and fifty years more.

Americans are remote from that wicked way of thinking. They know what NOAH was, no matter what was his reputation in Sumeria. They know that fermentation is the source of all evil; that the juices of the forbidden fruit were ruining this country. They know what biteth like a serpent. They probably have their own views on what the serpent in the Garden was. NOAH's reputation was lost ages ago, yet there is something beautifully contemporary in revealing him now as the origin of evil, an evil at last abolished by constitutional amendment. It is not with any vain hope of softening the condemnation of NOAH that the Sumerian story is here related. It is long-needed vindication of Mother EVE, and through her of the rightful and actual rulers of the world.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Universal Service and Sanity.

A curious illustration of the working of universal service comes from the New Jersey State Hospital for the Insane. As a result of the demobilization of the army the institution looks for a marked increase, during the next twelve months, in the number of the mentally diseased.

During the war many young men who were under treatment for nervous troubles, and not a few "border line cases" of insanity, were accepted by the draft boards. With some of these the result was disastrous; the nervous system broke down in the grim business of war. In the future there will doubtless be a stricter surveillance. But in a large majority of cases, it appears, outdoor life and discipline, even active service in France, proved a tonic. In some cases the men voluntarily entered the service for the benefit to be derived, including many inebriates and drug addicts. Today men of unstable nervous organization, having no other recourse, are drifting to asylum and hospital, in growing numbers.

What is good for the nervously enfeebled is as good and better for men of normal physique. This is, of course, a commonplace; but for that very reason it seems necessary to emphasize it. As the war fades in memory we are all disposed to think of the army in the old way, as something less important than a fifth wheel—even as a dubious item in the national budget. In a crisis it is the sacred ark of the nation's honor and happiness, and in all times it is an invaluable tonic and training for the nation's manhood.

Additions to the Canon.

One of the first practical benefits of Federal prohibition enforcement seems likely to be a recension of the Scriptures according to modern theories of criticism. Enforcement Commissioner JOHN F. KRAMER, addressing the clergymen of New York yesterday, said that "the passions, appetites, and desires of men made necessary the promulgation of the Ten Commandments now embodied in Holy Writ. Notwithstanding the fact that the Commandments and our criminal laws interfere with men's appetites, passions, and desires, yet they still stand and are obeyed by the great mass of the American people. So I am sure it will be with the Federal prohibition amendment and the laws enacted thereunder."

It appears from this that the prohibition amendment is the Eleventh Commandment, of equal authority with the others. The addition is welcome if belated. Indeed, one is surprised at Mr. KRAMER's moderation in demanding no more than equal authority; had he wished, he might have followed the suggestion made by a correspondent on this page yesterday morning, and by going over to Mohammedanism have found ready for his use a complete holy scripture in which prohibition is part of the groundwork of the creed and did not have to be written in as an afterthought.

Preaching Easier Than Practice.

The letter from Archbishop HAYES to the organizers of the campaign for the Irish loan makes a suggestion that is somewhat novel in the discussion of the Irish question, but is at least worth being tried when so many other methods have been tried without success. The Archbishop expresses—and seals by a substantial contribution—his approval of Professor DE VALERA'S plan "for the agricultural, commercial, and industrial development of Ireland." Politics is not mentioned, for such matters belong to Caesar. But the prelate continues: "If England would but approach in a large Christian spirit the dilemma the Irish problem has evolved, Erin would prove more than generous and noble as a friendly neighbor, would never permit herself to be the pawn of any foreign power, and would be foremost to maintain the highest standards of Christian civilization."

There has been little evidence of Christian spirit on any side of the Irish question, though religious differences have played such a disturbing part in delaying settlement. The Archbishop sees and expresses clearly one of the most serious obstacles—the fear that a fully independent Ireland would become a too dangerous ally of some future enemy. If the British Government should attempt the somewhat novel expedient of applying the principles of Christianity to politics there would be much less ground for that fear than there is at present. And it might be, also, that the English would be somewhat more willing to try it if they saw more evidences of Christian spirit on the other side of St. George's Channel.

TRADING WITH RUSSIA.

Our Shipments Will Be Taken by the Bolsheviki and Paid For with Stolen Gold.

By JEROME LANDFIELD.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

What is the prospect of carrying on the proposed trade with the Russian people by dealing with the Co-operatives? In this matter, it must be noted first of all that while the Co-operatives include millions of Russian peasants, their management has been seriously interfered with by the Bolshevist Government and at the present time the local units are unable to conduct any enterprise outside of Russia, or even with the large cities, except in accordance with the will of the provincial Commissars. Secondly, any proposed trading is dependent entirely upon transportation, and the transportation facilities, so far as they exist, are entirely in the hands of the Soviet Government. Thirdly, it is inconceivable that the Soviet Government will permit operations to take a form that would work against them politically. Fourthly, the peasants in the country districts are not in need of food, but of manufactured articles, while the Bolshevist Government itself is in possession of such stores of raw materials as might be available for exchange. It is therefore the Bolshevist Government that would utilize the goods imported, for the purpose of securing food supplies for the cities from the country districts.

The question of payment immediately arises. The statement alludes to the exchange for grain, flax, &c. The Bolsheviki themselves have frequently asserted that they were prepared to pay gold to the extent of $200,000,000. Let us consider the latter proposal. Some $500,000,000 of the Russian gold reserve is accounted for by the payments made to Germany under the Brest-Litovsk treaty and by the amount seized by the Russians and Czechoslovaks at Kazan. Of the balance in their possession, $125,000,000 is the Rumanian gold reserve, which was removed to Moscow for safekeeping when Rumania was invaded by the Germans. If the Bolshevist Government undertakes to expend this Rumanian gold, the Allies can scarcely recognize such transactions as legitimate. On the other hand, the remaining gold is State property and therefore, if the Allies legalize the use of this gold, in this way it becomes a technical recognition of the Soviet Government, and if they do not permit it, then those who accept it become receivers of stolen property and run the risk of future litigation.

As for the exchange of raw materials, the practical difficulties are very great. Even under the governments of Kolchak and Denikin, in possession of the richest raw-material-producing regions, it was not found possible to export very much. That the Soviet Government, with its nationalization of trade, and its general confusion and disorganization, will be able to do better is not to be expected. It will not be well, therefore, for American business men to pin large hopes on the prospects of business resulting from the plan announced by the Supreme Council.

It is well that the blockade should be lifted. As long as there were national Russian movements against the Bolshevist power, the blockade served its purpose in preventing the Bolsheviki from getting supplies with which to increase their military power. With the collapse of these national movements, thanks to the lack of the aid promised by the Allies, the significance of the blockade has disappeared. Whether it was ever an effective measure, and whether its advantages outweighed its disadvantages, is questioned by loyal Russians themselves, and recently there was a strong movement among the anti-Bolshevist Russians in favor of lifting it. Although, as Mr. Hoover clearly points out, the blockade has not been responsible for starvation in Russia, a condition brought about entirely by the incompetence, graft, and crazy economic experiments of the Bolsheviki, great use of it has been made by Bolshevist sympathizers as a propaganda argument. The lifting of the blockade would show up quickly the failure of the Bolshevist system, and it would, at the same time, open the horrors of the Bolshevist régime to the eyes of the world at large. It is scarcely possible that the system of terror by which that régime is maintained could long continue in the light of publicity, and the moment the system of terror is abandoned the present Bolshevist rulers must fall. It is possible, therefore, that the lifting of the blockade would greatly hasten that internal revolution from which alone can come a proper cleansing of the Russian state.

As regards the military danger to Europe and Asia presented by the Bolshevist army and the aggressive militaristic aims of its leaders, the announcement of the Supreme Council changes nothing. The civilized world is at war with Bolshevism. The two systems and ideas cannot exist side by side. If they prevail, we succumb—there is no middle course. The Bolsheviki realize clearly that the class warfare which they have inaugurated is doomed unless they can bring about general revolution. If they make peace or compromise, it is but to obtain a breathing space in which to carry on their propaganda more effectively, and to resume the attack when the time is propitious. There are some foolish ones among us who seem to think that the Bolsheviki have seen the errors of their programme and have reformed, and that since they are in possession of Russia we should recognize them. But this is impossible. We cannot compound the felony.

The greatest danger in this warfare is that, through a blundering policy of setting on the little States that were formerly parts of the Russian Empire to fight our battles for us, we shall transform the struggle against Bolshevism into a war with Russia. This would be a catastrophe, since it would unite all the patriotic national elements in Russia on the side of the Bolsheviki, in spite of their present antipathy for them. Our correct policy is to announce to all the world, first, that we will not recognize the tyrannical Bolshevist minority or collaborate with it; secondly, that we stand firmly for the unity and independence of Russia; and, thirdly, that we stand ready to co-operate in every way with the sound and constructive elements in Russia for the restoration and regeneration of their country.

MAYFLOWER BOLSHEVIKI.

A Valuable Principle Brought Over at an Early Date.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to your editorial article on "Our Native Radicals," the Bolsheviki, in clerical or academic gown, will not find much comfort in referring to the early settlers of our country.

On Nov. 11, 1620, the Pilgrim Fathers drew up the following compact: "We covenant and combine ourselves together into a civil body politic for our better ordering and preservation, and by virtue hereof, to enact such just and equal laws as shall be thought most mete and convenient for the general good of the colony, unto which we promise all due submission and obedience."

Why did these men, fleeing from the powers which made them submit and obey, "promise all due submission and obedience" to laws which they themselves made? William Bradford tells us. On that ship were certain "strangers," the Bolsheviki of three hundred years ago, who had "let fall in the ship discontented and mutinous speeches," the burden of which was that when they "came to shore they would use their own liberty, for none had power to command them."

In the Mayflower compact the Pilgrim Fathers, with mutinous and discontented "strangers" in their very midst, struck the keynote of our democracy in a document that the "educated" radicals ought not to ignore. Democracy guarantees to the individual freedom to think, but not necessarily freedom to put that thought into action. The "general good of the colony" is at stake, and "free action" must depend upon "just and equal laws."

The first thing, in a formal way, which the men of the Mayflower did, as they fled from restraint forced upon them to a land where they could be free, was to put themselves under restraint. Liberty was to be enjoyed under the sanction of law. The first principle of liberty to them was that of self-restraint. Because they lose sight of this fact, the well-intentioned men who desire to contribute to the solution of our social problem are doing incalculable harm.

Amerongen Anagrams.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Marmaduke M. Mizzle, having formed an anagram from the name of the Kaiser's residence, writes THE TIMES: "The only anagram that can be formed out of 'Amerongen' is 'one German,' which commencing with 'O' uses up the nine letters making the name of the quaint Dutch village."

Will Mr. Mizzle allow me to use the elements of his anagram to make the following slang phrase, thereby enriching the language with a gem-like, soul-stirring couplet fully expressive of the Kaiser's daily ruminations, namely:

One German,
'N' me a goner!

THE FIELD OF HONOR.

Leave our tired bones as they lie,
We shall sleep soft where we fell;
For we live, we did not die.
Hear our call—"All's well!"

Our bright bodies were of clay,
Mourn not, for the empty shell
Served His purpose in His way.

Through the gates of life unbarred
Sped our souls with you to dwell,
Soldiers of God's bodyguard.

NEW YORK BOYS WIN HONORS

Eight from This City Included in Harvard Scholarship List.

Eight New York City men are included in this year's scholarship list at Harvard College, which has been announced at the college office.

Theodore Dunham, Jr., a junior, and Alfred E. Mirsky, a sophomore, won John Harvard Scholarships by virtue of their standing in the first group of scholars. This group is made up of those undergraduates whose work in the preceding college year entitles them to "very high academic distinction." No student is admitted to this group until his record for his preceding year in all his courses has been submitted to every one of his teachers.

Mortimer L. Anson, a sophomore; Charles J. Young, a junior, and Paul D. Van Anda, a senior, won Harvard College Scholarships.

These men stood in the second group of scholars, which includes men of distinguished academic standing, whose record, nevertheless, falls somewhat short of the first group standard. In the second group, which is the largest group of scholars this year, of whom nineteen came from outside New England. There were 120 second group scholars.

DEFERS FOOD RELIEF ACTION

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Action by the House Ways and Means Committee on Secretary's Glass's request for authorization to lend Austria, Poland, and other European countries $150,000,000 for food relief, was deferred today until representatives of the Red Cross can be examined Wednesday as to plans of that organization for European relief.

Former Representative Chandler of New York filed a statement with the committee today urging the food relief in behalf of new European countries, including Esthonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Azerbaijan and Georgia, which, he said, had formed "an immovable barrier against Bolshevism for more than two years." He declared that General Bliss's recent statement that Poland was the "only bulwark against the Bolsheviki," was an "injustice" to these smaller countries.

$85,000,000 FOR MEDICAL AID

Proposed in Bill to Help Discharged Army and Navy Men.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The appropriation of $85,000,000, to be expended in the next four years for hospital and other facilities for discharged soldiers, sailors, marines and nurses, was proposed in a bill introduced today by Senator FRANCE, Republican, Maryland. The medical aid contemplated would be under the direction of the Public Health Service.

The Governor also nominated James A. Farley of Grassy Point, Leroy A. Judge of Northport, and Julius V. Lyons of New York, as Port Wardens of the Port of New York. The nominations were referred to the Finance Committee.

ART MUSEUM'S YEAR BIGGEST IN HISTORY

CITY TO GIVE MORE HELP

Purchase of "The Harvesters," an Important Early Flemish Painting, Announced.

Robert W. de Forest announced at the annual meeting of the corporation of the Metropolitan Museum of Art yesterday that the attendance at the Museum in the past year had been the largest in any normal year, having been exceeded only during the exceptional years of the Hudson-Fulton and J. Pierpont Morgan exhibitions. The total for the year was 830,043, an increase of 227,696 over the previous year. At the same time the city's contribution to the expenses of the Museum dropped to a lower percentage than ever before, amounting to only 28 per cent. of the total, while in 1906 it was 63½ per cent.

As a result of the reduced appropriation by the city, Mr. de Forest said: "After considering various measures of possible economy the Trustees decided in the interest of the city and the public to keep the entire Museum open on full time, with the single exception of Saturday evenings, but the adoption of this policy has strained the financial resources of the Museum and has prevented the acquisition of objects of art which otherwise could have been acquired."

"The city has raised its budget appropriation for the present year to $300,000," Mr. de Forest continued, "which is a matter for congratulation, but even with this help the problem faced by the Trustees at the beginning of the year is that of retrenchment. Curtailment along the lines of service to the public in the ways already inaugurated would be regrettable, and no less unfortunate would be the curtailment of purchases of works of art, especially at this time of unprecedented opportunities. It is much to be hoped that the important service rendered to the city by the Museum may be recognized by the city authorities and that the proportion which the city's contribution for administration formerly bore to the Museum's contribution should be restored.

"The statement of former years, that the expense of running the Museum increased in greater proportion than its income, is repeated this year more emphatically than ever before. The city appropriation was $58,000 less than for the year before. The cost of administration was $622,788.12. The income from all administration sources, including the amount granted by the city, $410,000, was $348,469.20. The deficit, $274,318.92, was met by the Trustees, partly from funds normally used for the purchase of works of art and partly from private contributions.

In the annual report Mr. De Forest states that, in addition to the marked increase in attendance at the Museum the salient features in the history of the Museum during the last year have been:

"There has been the largest attendance, without exception, of teachers and pupils at the Museum for instruction. The number was 136,823.

"There has been a complete demonstration of the desirability of adding music of a high order to the other attractions of the Museum. The attendance at the eight orchestral concerts given during the Winter aggregated 30,041. These were given through the contributions of Mr. De Forest, Samuel T. Peters, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Michael J. Friedsam.

The most important additions to the art collections of the museum, either acquired or first exhibited during the year, are the following:

"The great collection of Dürer's etchings and wood cuts, formed by Junius S. Morgan, and ranking, both in quality and number, close to the Dürer collections of London and Paris.

"The seven Egyptian statues of the Goddess Sekhmet and the Egyptian jewelry from the tomb of the Princess Sathathor-Iunut.

"The complete set of gilded and engraved armor for man and horse made for Sieur Jacques Gourdon de Genouillhac in 1527.

"The two portraits by Ingres.

"Memory, a statue by Daniel C. French.

"The two tapestries bequeathed to the Museum by Mrs. Augustus D. Juilliard."

During the year three Honorary Fellows were elected: David Mannes, C. Davies Sherborn, and Naohide Yatsu.

According to the report, "a picture of the Crucifixion attributed to Pesellino is the only painting of the earlier schools which the department of painting has added by purchase, with the exception of an important early Flemish painting, "The Harvesters," the purchase of which has been consummated and not yet publicly announced."

"In the year 1920 the Museum completes its first half century of existence," Mr. de Forest says. "This event will be appropriately commemorated and the precise nature of this commemoration will be announced early in the year."

Among those who attended the meeting were William Church Osborn, Edward S. Harkness, Samuel T. Peters, Dr. J. H. Lancashire, Banyer Clarkson, Allison V. Armour, Miss Eleanor Blodgett, Mrs. Morris Loeb, Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. de Forest, Lewis Cass Ledyard, Mrs. Pierre Mali, Daniel C. French, George Plumenthal, Miss Elisabeth R. Wellington, Mrs. Henry S. Pritchett, Francis C. Jones, Mrs. William Reed Thompson, Mrs. Henry O. Taylor, Howard Mansfield, Henry Walters, R. T. Haines Halsey.

JAPANESE PRINTS SOLD.

The sale of an interesting collection of Japanese color prints, including important specimens from the collection of an old Samurai family in Tokio, brought together by Bunkio Matsuki, began at the Anderson Galleries last evening. 211 numbers bringing $2,694. A beautiful album with Donsu silk cover, 55 sheets, a complete set of Tokaido Gojusan Tsugi, all the prints in a publisher's state, brought the highest price of the evening, going to H. E. Bauer for $195.

These prints originally belonged to Tsuruyemon Matsumoto of Tokio and later passed into the hands of Tadamasa Mayashi whose certified seal is stamped on the first print. Nihonbashi Bridge, Hiroshige's "Ohashi in Downfall of Rain," one of those drenching showers which seem to fall only in Japanese prints, little figures with umbrellas hurrying over a bridge, went to Amy Lowell for $180; the same artist's "Fox Fire at Oji," fine early impression, went to Miss E. Counehan, agent, for $90, and "Kuwana," a large ferry boat under full sail, one of Hiroshige's most famous marine landscapes, went to the same buyer for $80.

DRINKWATER TO PUT R. E. LEE INTO A PLAY

Author of "Abraham Lincoln" Also to Complete a Trilogy with John Brown for a Motif.

TO BE WRITTEN IN ENGLAND

Author Will Not Visit Scenes of Momentous Events He Aims to Portray on the Stage.

John Drinkwater, author of the play, "Abraham Lincoln," expects to have a companion piece ready by the end of the year, dealing with the life of General Robert E. Lee, the famous Southern commander. To complete a trilogy he hopes to do another play using John Brown, the abolitionist, as the central figure.

Mr. Drinkwater said yesterday that he could speak of the Lee play only in the most general terms. While he has not yet put pen to paper the subject is vivid in his mind. A play about the leader of a lost cause is always of interest, he said.

The play is to be done in the same manner as the Lincoln play, restricting itself to clearness of outline and conception rather than to a mass of details. "In so far as I have achieved clearness of outline in the Lincoln play," he added by way of parenthesis.

Mr. Drinkwater is much interested in the mental complex of the Southern leader when making his great decision. Then the fact that Lee was an aristocrat in contrast to the humble lineage of Lincoln also stimulates his desire to do the play. He intends to present fairly the other side of the shield. To do so the author will have the play move during the same period as the Lincoln play.

While he is appreciative of the kindnesses offered him by some who know of his desire to write a play of General Lee, Mr. Drinkwater will not avail himself of the opportunity to visit the historic places associated with the name of the Southern leader. Just as soon as he can clear up some urgent work in this country he will return to England. In his own home, with the materials used in preparing the play on Lincoln, Mr. Drinkwater believes he will find the proper perspective in which to cast the new piece. Paucity of detail and a broad, sympathetic interpretation will mark the second play. To those who may question the wisdom of an Englishman writing a play about a great American, Mr. Drinkwater offers the reply that an American might well be fitted to write a true play of a representative Englishman, such as Gladstone, for example. An American would see Gladstone in clear outline, unhampered by a mass of detail that might tend to obtrude itself were the author in close physical proximity to the associations surrounding his chosen subject.

Mr. Drinkwater is greatly interested in the warm welcome that New York audiences are according to General Lee in "Abraham Lincoln," notwithstanding the fact that the play permits only a fleeting glimpse of the commander. The poet has received many letters from Southerners commenting kindly on Lincoln, and few that retain any of the old bitterness of the civil war. This experience has caused him to feel that the latter represent merely an individual here and there, but that for the most part the Southerners realize the honesty and fairness that moved Lincoln.

The play dealing with John Brown will of necessity be a more slender piece than either of the other plays of the trilogy, said Mr. Drinkwater. He was not prepared to speak in more detail of it. The play dealing with General Lee will be put on by William Harris, Jr., the producer of "Abraham Lincoln."

Mr. Harris announced yesterday that he had completed arrangements with Mr. Drinkwater for another play centering about Mary Queen of Scots. This will be produced first in London late in the Spring, but the play about General Lee is to have its world premier in America.

DECISION BOUTS ARE PROVIDED FOR IN TWO BOXING BILLS INTRODUCED IN STATE LEGISLATURE

BILLS INTRODUCED TO RESTORE BOXING

Senator Jas. J. Walker Sponsor for One and Assemblyman Harvey Ross for Other.

EACH CALLS FOR DECISION

Many of the Features of Former Laws Are Included in Latest Measures to Revive Sport.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 19.—Two bills, designed to make boxing "clean and wholesome" were offered the Legislature tonight in another attempt to place the sport on a legal basis in the State.

One measure, introduced by Senator James J. Walker, minority leader in the Senate, on behalf of the Army and Navy Civilian Board of Boxing and Control and backed by some of the most influential men in the country, would place the boxing game under supervision of a commission of three and license every one connected with a contest. The supervising commission would have sole direction, management, control, and jurisdiction over all boxing. Annual permits would be granted only to licensed corporations, which would have to be bonded to the extent of $5,000 with the State Controller.

The licensing provision would take in not only the corporations established to conduct boxing, but also physicians, judges, timekeepers, boxers, managers, trainers, seconds, and referees.

"The principle of licensing boxers will have a nation-wide effect," declared Senator Walker tonight, "as the fact that every boxer will have to take out a license will bring boxers, who will come from all over the country into New York under the immediate control of the License Committee."

Fifteen Rounds to Decision.

The provision to employ two judges in addition to a referee, contained in the bill, will make the possibility of unfair decisions most difficult, according to Senator Walker. The bill would permit bouts of fifteen rounds. The army and navy schedule of weights would be adopted.

Senator Walker called attention tonight to the swing of popular favor in the universities in favor of boxing.

"One of the reasons for this conversion," he said, "is that hundreds of thousands of the young heroes who have returned from the war have borne eloquent and enthusiastic testimony to the splendid effects boxing had exercised over them in training camps where boxing was made, by order of the Government, one of the compulsory features of military training."

The bill is somewhat similar to one introduced last year which was passed by the Senate, but held up in Rules Committee to die in the Assembly.

Features of Ross Bill.

The other bill legalizing boxing was introduced by Assemblyman Harvey J. Ross, Republican, of Kings County. The Ross bill would establish a State athletic commission of three members. The measure provides for 12-round bouts under the supervision of the commission, which is also compelled to choose the referee, timekeeper, and medical man who examines the boxers. It provides also for a decision The State would obtain 10 per cent. of the gross receipts.

The measure would provide for a commission of three to be appointed by the Governor with the consent of the Senate to hold office for the remainder of the year, their successors to be elected for two years. The commission would have no supervision over amateur and sparring contests.

ADMITS COCHRAN CONTRACT

Carpentier's Manager Recognizes Claim to Services in Cablegram.

The repeated conflicting reports from abroad as to the contract between François Descamps, manager of Georges Carpentier, European heavyweight champion, and Charles B. Cochran, English promoter, caused Mr. Cochran yesterday to issue a copy of a cablegram he had received from M. Descamps refuting the reports that the contract is soon to expire. Manager Descamps cabled as follows::

"Awating your decision. Have entertained no other offers whatever. Will not do so unless released by you."

This cable was received yesterday in reply to a cable which Promoter Cochran sent to Descamps Saturday. In making known his cable from Manager Descamps, Promoter Cochran said: "This, I think, should put an end to all rumors concerning the contract and its reported expiration in February." The English promoter has not yet received Jack Dempsey's acceptance of his offer for a bout with Carpentier. Promoter Cochran plans to sail for England on Jan. 27.

RANSOM WINS WITH FOILS.

Takes First Honors in N. Y. A. C. Novice Fencing Tournament.

Frank Ransom of the Fencers' Club, a former Yale fellsman, carried off the pair of foils offered by Dr. Graeme M. Hammond, President of the Amateur Fencers' League of America, to the winner in the novice foils tournament last night at the New York A. C. The former Eli fencer, making his first competitive appearance since he was discharged from the navy more than a year ago, led a field of twenty-three rivals for the prize, scoring a succession of nine victories in the preliminary, semi-final and final rounds.

Ransom showed masterful ability with the foil in his remarkable string of victories. He went through the preliminary round on the third strip, vanquishing four rivals in his qualifying effort. In the semi-final round, the Fencers' Club representative encountered his greatest opposition, but, in this bracket, as in the preceding one, his wonderfully skillful use of the tapering weapon brought him out victorious. He defeated C. Brackett of the New York A. C., and Millard J. Bloomer, Columbia University, intercollegiate champion, in two hotly contested and interesting bouts by scores of 5-4 in each instance. Ransom was put on his mettle to win these engagements, but fenced like a veteran and was rewarded with victory.

In the final, he encountered John F. Leicester of Yale, H. A. Hirsh, a clubmate, and Bloomer, but in this instance Ransom was returned victorious by comparatively easy scores. He disposed of both Hirsh and Leicester, permitting only two touches against his ten, and, in his second clas against Bloomer, he disposed of the intercollegiate title-holder by the impressive marking of 5 to 3.

The contestants were:

A. W. Walker, Jr., John F. Leicester, F. Bishop, Jr., and W. B. McCay, Yale University; Arthur Townsend, H. A. CINDER PATH IN ARMORY.

Eighth Coast Artillery to Have a Quarter-Mile Track Indoors.

The Eighth Coast Artillery Corps Armory, located at West Kingsbridge Road and Jerome Avenue, the Bronx, will contain a 440-yard indoor cinder-path, the only track of its kind in the world. The details of construction work which will provide this immense indoor track have already progressed to the extent that work will soon be started on the project. It is expected that the track will have been completed by May, and it is intended to utilize the track for the first time near the end of the indoor season with an open athletic meet.

In addition to the 440-yard track it is planned to lay out a 220-yard straightaway and a 120-yard high hurdle straightaway and to provide four basketball courts, two indoor baseball diamonds, and twenty-five tennis courts. The dimensions of the floor space are 300 feet wide and 600 feet long. These measurements will permit of the installation of many outdoor athletic privileges.

FIVE FAVORITES WIN AT FAIR GROUNDS

Public Choices Run to Form at New Orleans—Bolster Takes Seminole Handicap.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 19.—Despite the fact that an ordinary card was offered to begin the week's racing, and also that the track at the Fair Grounds remained heavy today, even though the weather had cleared, it was altogether a good day for the players. In the course of the seven races five of the public choices came home in front, and this observance of form made up for some of the shortcomings of the program.

The Seminole Handicap, a test at a mile and a sixteenth for four-year-olds and upward, was offered as the feature of the day, and was won easily by G. W. Forman's Bolster, which scored a victory by three lengths against a field of five starters. Bolster was one of the five favorites to win, and was so well backed that he went to the post at 11 to 10.

This was the third appearance of Bolster at the local track, and he showed today that he had finally rounded into good form. On the other two occasions he finished second, once to Simpleton and again to Chief, but both times gave evidence of ability to do better. Today he was able to win almost as he pleased, when let down in the stretch.

Jockey Thurber kept Bolster close to the pace all the way through the backstretch, and Dottie Vandiver, which was out in front, could never get far enough away to be safe. Turning into the stretch, Thurber let the winner have his head, and Bolster rushed into the lead and drew away handily. Dottie Vandiver had some bad luck at the turn into the stretch, which, while it did not appear to cost her the victory, since Bolster appeared to be the best, nevertheless cost her the place. She got into the heaviest part of the going and swerved in an effort to get back into the beaten path. In the meantime Drummond came up and took the place by a neck, Dottie Vandiver tiring at the end, after making a game effort at a recovery. Sailor and Eulogy, which made up the remainder of the field, were never contenders at any stage of the race. There was much excuse for Sailor, however, as he was practically left at the post and made a game effort once he got under way.

St. Isidore Runs Impressively.

St. Isidore, which has been threatening to win a race ever since he came out in the Autumn at Empire City, finally carried that threat into execution today in the third event, a six-furlong dash. This sprinter, now owned by J. E. Nash, made the victory impressive, winning by six lengths. Pullux was second and A. N. Atkin third in a field of ten.

While Pullux and Siesta were running each other down with a fast pace, St. Isidore was kept under restraint until making his move into the stretch, when he saved considerable ground, gained the best part of the track and forged ahead to make a show of the others. He had little trouble in overtaking Siesta, which tired suddenly in the stretch and gave up the contest. Pullux ran courageously, but when St. Isidore passed him in the stretch he could not increased his speed. A. N. Atkin came along to take third from Siesta. Cobalt Lass was out in front for just a few strides, but got into bad going and ceased to be a contender.

The maiden two-year-old race, at three furlongs, went easily to Silver Springs, which took the measure of H. P. Whitney's Whippet by three lengths in the short dash. Bunga Buck, owned by J. W. McClelland, was third. The winner, a colt by Aeronaut, moved into a commanding lead in the first furlong, and was well out in front all the rest of the way. Whippet was away slowly and had to be hard ridden, but managed to get going, and disposed of the others with considerable ease.

Large Fields of Platers.

Some large fields went to the post in the events for the selling platers. There were twelve starters in the second race at six furlongs, in which Archie Alexander took the winner's share easily from Duke of Devonshire, with Bond third. The winner had to be the best, as he was forced back at the start and had to go around his field to reach the front. He finally made a dash in the stretch and disposed of Duke of Devonshire, which had been the pace maker.

Grumpy was an easy winner in another field of eight at a mile and a furlong. He got out in front in the back stretch and ran away from the others, having three lengths the best of it at the finish. Ben Hampson got up to take the place from Dioscoride.

Cabello scored a close decision over Tanlac in the sixth event at a mile and a sixteenth, winning by a head in a driving finish. Astraea was out in front most of the way, but tired in the stretch and the winner came from far back to take the victory.

Jack K. also won a close verdict in the last race over the mile and a sixteenth route. He beat Bajazet by a head after these two had moved away from the rest of the field and had the race to themselves, Brown Favorite was third six length back.

Hollohan Signs with Rochester.

Bill Hollohan, a Bronx boy, who played second base for the Treat-Em-Roughs last season, has been signed to play with the Rochester Club of the International League by Manager Arthur Irwin. Hollohan will join the club when it goes to Goldsboro, N. C., to train in March.

FORDHAM WILL BE STRONG.

Many Promising Baseball Candidates—Arranges Hard Schedule.

Great preparations are being made at Fordham University for the coming baseball season. Evidently the Bronx collegians intend to make a strong bid for the championship of the East, which they came within an ace of winning last year. Baseball experts rated them second to Holy Cross, and the Maroon nine was the only team to register a victory over the Worcester aggregation.

Aloysius F. Arthur, the Fordham manager, is preparing his schedule, which, from present indications, will be the most imposing list of games ever arranged at the Bronx institution and will include most of the leading teams of the East. Contests have already been booked with Harvard, Princeton, Pennsylvania, Holy Cross, Army, West Virginia, Columbia and Dartmouth, in addition to a score of other teams. The complete schedule, which will be ready for publication within the next fortnight, will consist of at least thirty games, more than half of which will be played at Fordham Field.

The Maroon nine probably will open its season with the Boston College team, whose star pitcher, Fitzpatrick, registered two victories over the New Yorkers last year. The game will be staged at Fordham Field on April 1.

The contests with Pennsylvania, Harvard, and Lehigh will mean a renewal of athletic relations with these institutions after the lapse of almost a decade. Colgate, Dartmouth, West Virginia, and Tufts will appear on the schedule for the first time in several years. The University of Pittsburgh nine will visit Fordham Field on May 20.

One of the features of the schedule is the contest with the Giants, which will be staged at the Polo Grounds on April 12, two days before the opening of the league season. Arrangements are now being made to hold a celebration in honor of Frank Frisch, the star shortstop of the Fordham nine last year, who will probably appear in the lineup against his former teammates.

Plans are now practically completed for the annual Southern trip, which will be made during the Easter vacation. The Maroon nine will meet Villanova at Villanova, Pa.; Johns Hopkins at Baltimore, and Catholic University at Washington. A game is also pending with the Baltimore Orioles, champions of the International League, which club Fordham defeated at Baltimore last Spring by a score of 9 to 7.

Home and home series have been scheduled with Columbia, Holy Cross, Boston, Johns Hopkins, Catholic University, and Villanova. Efforts are being made to arrange games with the teams from the University of Oregon and the University of California, both of which will make an Eastern trip in the Spring.

Great disappointment has been expressed at Fordham over the absence of Yale from the list of games. Fordham and Yale engaged in two extra inning contests last year, each team being victorious in one. The New Haven authorities have notified the Fordham management that they will be unable to give the Maroon aggregation a place on their schedule this season.

Prospects for a strong nine at the Bronx university are brighter than in many years in spite of the loss of Frank Frisch, who was the mainstay of the team during the last campaign. Seven of the regulars have returned to college this year and, in addition, several stars from Fordham Prep and other high schools will be candidates for the team. Among the veterans are: Lefevre, third baseman and Captain of the 1920 team; McLoughlin, first baseman; Keough, left fielder; Buckley, centre fielder, and Donovan, catcher. The pitching staff should be particularly strong, as the veterans Finn, MacNamara, and Halloran will probably be in shape to take their regular turns in the box from the start of the season.

Arthur Devlin, whose efforts as coach during his first year at Fordham, were crowned with notable success, has recently affixed his signature to a contract to direct Fordham's baseball destinies for another year. He announced last night that he will issue the first call for candidates on Feb. 15.

MURPHY WINS ON ICE.

The summaries:

One-Mile, Class A, Handicap—Won by William Murphy, 181st Street Ice Palace (10 yards); Robert Hearn, 181st Street Ice Palace (15 yards), second; Leslie Boyd, Tremont Skating Club (scratch), third. Time—2:55 1-5.

One-Mile, Class B, Handicap—Won by Louis Morris, Peerless Skating Club (10 yards); Leslie McGrath, Riverside Skating Club (scratch), second; Joseph Rowland, Brooklyn Ice Palace (45 yards), third. Time—3:01 4-5.

POULTRY SHOW AT GARDEN.

Nearly 2,300 Classes Are to be Judged This Week.

With only a few birds delayed by the storm, the thirty-first annual show of the New York Poultry and Pigeon Association will open this morning at Madison Square Garden, to continue until Saturday night. Coops or pens have been pre-empted for 7,000 poultry exhibits, inclusive of geese, ducks, and turkeys; 2,000 pigeons, 2,000 bantams, 500 rabbits, 250 cavies, and, on Thursday and Friday, 125 cats will be shown by members of the Empire City Cat Club.

The judging will begin at 10 o'clock this morning, with thirty-one poultry, nine pigeon and three pet stock judges at work. Nearly 2,300 classes in all have to be judged before the cat show opens on Thursday morning, and some $15,000 in prize money will have been awarded to the owners of the feather and fur exhibits by that time.

Pit games will be well represented, as well as the Indian and Cornish ornamental sorts. Those to reach their coops early included the exhibits of Mr. and Mrs. Payne Whitney, P. H. B. Frelinghuysen, E. and M. H. Dixon, Jr., and Mrs. L. Greene, the former District Attorney of Suffolk County, who are all amateur fanciers of this old sporting type of bird.

Thirty-seven selected birds of pedigreed egg-laying strains arrived with the first flocks at the Garden from the Government Poultry Farm, at Beltsville, Md. They included Wyandottes, Barred Plymouth Rocks, and Leghorns. H. Cecil Sheppard, with eighty-one Anconas, is the largest individual exhibitor of a single strain, and he came in with his speckled layers from Bereal, Ohio, in the forenoon. The Government birds, and the educational department of the show are in charge of Senior Poultryman Harry M. Lamon of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Homer pigeons with war records were cooped by soldiers from the army pigeonries, and sailors from the Naval Aircraft Signal Corps. The army coop is topped by a brass cannon and draped in the national colors.

Grace Club Five in Semi-Final.

The strong Grace Club Basketball Team, which defeated the Rutgers Gymnasium five, last year's champions, in the opening round of the Metropolitan A. A. U. 145-pound championship basketball tournament at City College last week, will play in the semi-final round Saturday night at the C. C. N. Y. court. The team is composed of Henry Fredericks and William Guyane, forwards; Theodore Schils, centre, and Matthew Worster and Bruno Gatuso, guards. The substitutes include John Paschon, John Weuhnle, and M. Bottjer.

WOOD IS WINNER IN POOL TOURNEY

Before one of the largest galleries that has ever witnessed an amateur billiard event at John Doyle's Academy the pocket billiard tournament for the national championship of the American Amateur Billiard Association was opened last night. Thomas Lawler, who recently won the championship of No. 1 Lodge of Elks, was pitted against Courtney Wood, and the latter won by a score of 100 to 71 in a decidedly interesting, if not a brilliantly, played match.

Both these players are conceded to be among the leading amateur pocket billiardists in the country, but the size of the crowd apparently had its effect on their nerves, for it was evident they were nervous and this materially handicapped their work, especially during the early frames. This handicap seemed to linger longer with Lawler than with Wood, and, to an appreciable extent, this accounted for his failure to show to better advantage. Then, too, Lawler has been doing his playing at the Elks' Club and, it is said, the cushions on the table there are not as fast as those which he encountered last night. This affected his position play. Had he been a little more accurate in this department of the game there is no gainsaying that he would have made the contest much closer and would have stood a much better chance to win.

There are eight players entered in this round robin affair, so that this defeat does not necessarily mean that Lawler must be counted out of the running. On the contrary, he is still one of the favorites, and is counted upon to be among those who will give Edward Kirby, the present title holder, a real tussle for the honors. Lawler showed that he has a perfect stroke, and there is no phase of the game that is a mystery to him. He is particularly good on executing difficult shots; in fact, most of his misses were recorded on the simplest shots. In a measure this might be attributed to carelessness and a desire to shoot too quickly.

MORRISON BEATS WALDRON.

Scores His Third Victory in English Billiard Tournament.

ENGLISH BILLIARD STANDING.
National Championship.

Player.	W.	L.	H.B.	P.C.
R. Morrison	3	0	55	1000
J. Wood	3	1	45	.750
J. O'Neil	2	1	48	.667
E. Cahill	1	2	35	.333
W. Waldron	1	3	38	.250
F. Pye	0	3	33	.000

Robert Morrison increased his lead in the A. A. B. A. national English billiard championship tournament at Doyle's Academy last night when he defeated William Waldron by a score of 250 to 163. Morrison has won all three of his games. His nearest contender is Jackson Wood, who has won three of his four matches.

In spite of the fact that he has been ill for the last few days and was far from feeling at his proper as his game indicated, Morrison has never shown to better advantage. His high breaks of 43, 31 and 23 furnish sufficient proof of his ability to control the ivories. He played at top speed throughout, while Waldron never seemed to be able to get going. The latter's best breaks were 22, 19 and 17. Waldron was not master of his stroke. He is capable of much better billiards, but last night he was inconsistent and, in the face of his opponent's excellent playing, appeared in the light of a man who almost was outclassed.

BRUSSEL WINS CUE TITLE.

Defeats Servatius for National Class C Billiard Honors.

FINAL CLASS C STANDING.
National 18.2 Billiard Championship.

Player.	W.	L.	H.R.	H.A.
S. M. Brussel	5	2	26	6 12-33
L. A. Servatius	4	3	26	4 15-30
F. W. Boyd	3	3	34	4 26-31
J. Neustadt	3	3	30	5 5-39
J. Langdon	3	3	31	5 30-40
J. R. Johann	3	3	25	4 17-29
C. J. Steinbugler	1	5	23	5 30-40

In the playoff for the national championship in the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players' Class C 18-2 balkline tournament at Lawler Brothers' Academy, in Brooklyn, last night, Sidney R. Brussel clinched the title by defeating Louis A. Servatius by a score of 150 to 115. It was a tight squeeze for Brussel, for he was compelled to play a strong uphill game almost throughout. Servatius finished second in the tourney as a result of this defeat. Four players were tied for third position, but this was decide by the Olympic system, in which the number of points made by each of the players in all his games is taken into consideration. In this manner Frank W. Boyd was awarded third place, with a total of 828 points for six games; Joseph Neustadt, last year's champion, fourth, with 818; James Langdon fifth, with 817, and J. R. Johann sixth, with 804. Charley Steinbugler was a poor last, having won but one of his six matches.

At the start of last night's match Servatius was in excellent form. He jumped into the lead and for a time loomed up as an almost sure winner. He led up to the thirty-fifth inning, when Brussel suddenly found his stroke and rattled off 14 without missing. This put Brussel in the lead by a score of 106 to 105. On his next turn at the table Brussel made his high run, a cluster of 26, and Servatius having failed to count, the score then stood 135 to 105 in Brussel's favor. From that time to the end the ultimate winner was never seriously pressed by Servatius.

In averaging 3 9-47 Brussel did well, considering the poor start he made. And, considering the poor finish he made, Servatius did well to average 2 23-46. His best run was 16.

FOSS DEFEATED BY TILT.

Loses Opening Match in State Pocket Billiard Tournament.

The first tournament for the pocket billiard championship of New York State to be held under the auspices of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players wass tarted at the National Recreation Academy in Brooklyn last night. It was the occasion for a big outpouring of fans in spite of the inclement weather, and when William A. Tilt and Humboldt Foss stepped to the table for the opening game the academy was packed almost to capacity. Naturally, both players suffered somewhat from stage fright, and they were not at their best. Tilt, who represents the Calumet Club, was the least affected, and he scored a decidedly easy victory, 100 to 51.

Neither player performed brilliantly; in fact, the quality of pocket billiards was little better than mediocre, a fact attested to by the high runs. Tilt's best run was 14, and Foss's 9. The winner excelled in all departments of play. His position work and his execution were better than Foss's. His stroke was steadier and he missed fewer easy shots than his opponent.

WILL SEND HOCKEY TEAM TO ANTWERP

National Association to be Represented by Winner of Elimination Tourney.

BOSTON, Jan. 19.—The National Hockey Association, meeting in annual session at the Boston Athletic Association Building today, decided that the ultimate winner of a series of elimination matches between an All-Boston team and teams representing the Pittsburgh, Cleveland and St. Paul Athletic Associations should represent the United States in the Olympic ice hockey games at Antwerp in April. The elimination matches will be played next month.

Cornelius Fellowes, President of the International Skating Union, with which the national association is affiliated, was elected President of the latter body also. The other officers chosen were: W. S. Haddock, Pittsburgh Athletic Association, Vice President, and George V. Brown, Boston Athletic Association, Secretary-Treasurer. The directors named are Roy Davis, Illipois Athletic Club; W. S. Haddock, Pittsburgh; Herbert Meyer, Philadelphia; Allan I. Blanchard, Los Angeles; R. W. Dodd, San Francisco; T. M. Dunn, Portland, Ore.

A New England hockey association was formed, with Hugh McGrath of Boston as President.

It was voted to hold the Western New England skating championship at Springfield on Friday and Saturday of this week.

BAKER TO COACH SOLDIERS.

Middle-Distance Star in Charge of 14th Regiment Athletes.

Homer Baker, of the Glencoe A. C., former half-mile champion, present Metropolitan titleholder, and at one time holder of the British half-mile championship, will retire from track activities after the Olympic games at Antwerp this year. Baker has joined the Fourteenth Regiment, Brooklyn, and has been appointed coach of the regiment's athletes. The Glencoe star, under the rules of the A. A. U., is prohibited from accepting money for his coaching duties, either directly or indirectly, so that his efforts as a developer of athletes will be without remuneration until he decides to abandon his amateur career. This, Baker plans to do after the Olympic games.

Baker, who was selected by Frederick W. Rubien for his all-American track and field team, is regarded as a point winner for Uncle Sam in the coming Olympiad. He will probably be chosen to carry the American standard in the 800-meter run, his specialty.

Baker came into prominence as a middle-distance runner, shortly before the last Olympic meet. He broke his novice career as a member of the Central Y. M. C. A., Brooklyn, and subsequently joined the New York A. C. He remained with the Mercury foot organization for several years. Three years ago Baker sustained injuries to his leg in a motorcycle accident, which kept him inactive for a long period.

ENGLAND IS BEATEN BY AUSTRALIA ON COURTS IN SECOND DAY'S PLAY FOR THE DAVIS CUP

AUSTRALIANS WIN IN DOUBLES MATCH

Straight-Set Victory Gives Them 2 to 1 Lead Over Britons for Davis Cup Honors.

ALLOW LOSERS TWO GAMES

Brookes and Patterson Play Masterly Tennis in Defeating Kingscote and Beamish, 6-0, 6-0, 6-2.

SYDNEY, Australia, Jan. 19.—Playing the doubles contest for the Davis Cup championship took place here today, Norman Brookes and Gerald Patterson of Australia defeating A. R. F. Kingscote and A. E. Beamish of Great Britain 6–0, 6–0, 6–2. This event should have been played on Saturday, but was postponed on account of rain.

The doubles match was played in muggy weather in the presence of 7,000 spectators. The courts were slow, owing to the two days' rain.

Brookes gave a masterly exhibition, but Patterson's work was patchy. Kingscote played well, but Beamish was outclassed. There were some fine rallies in the last set, but the Australian pair was far too good to give the British team a chance.

Yesterday's victory in the doubles gives Australasia a lead of two matches to one in the struggle for the defense of the Davis Cup, and an even break in the two remaining singles contests today will assure the retention of the trophy by the present holders. American tennis fans were particularly interested in the showing that Brookes and Patterson would make against the best English doubles combination, as they won the championship of the United States last Summer after exceedingly close battles with the ex-champions, Tilden and Richards, and the previous title-holders, Johnson and Griffin. Later they were defeated by the impromptu team of Johnston and Tilden, who had never before played together, in a special series of international matches at Forest Hills.

America's Record Better.

Judged by this basis of comparison, America's doubles teams are still somewhat in advance of the English, for no combination here received such a one-sided beating from Brookes and Patterson as they yesterday handed Kingscote and Beamish, presumably the best pair that Great Britain could put together.

Kingscote won his singles on Friday against J. O. Anderson, a youngster who has never before represented Australia in competition, but whose recent record must have been extraordinary to give him precedence over such men as Brookes, Pat O'Hara Wood, Hawks, Thomas, Heath and Lycett. It is not likely that he will be used again today, particularly as Brookes seems to have proved conclusively in the doubles that his physical condition, about which there was some doubt, is as good as ever.

Patterson beat A. H. Lowe without great difficulty last Friday, and should defeat Kingscote as easily today. These two met in the final round at Wimbledon last Summer, and, on that occasion, Patterson won in straight sets. He had previously eliminated Brookes, while Kingscote reached the final through a victory over Charles S. Garland of Yale.

Forecasts Final Victory.

Anderson's name appears in the records of recent interstate matches in Australia and in the championship of New South Wales, but there is no indication of his holding any important titles. If Brookes takes his place in the singles the defenders are quite capable of winning the series by a score of 4 to 1. A. H. Lowe, on whose play the cup may depend today, was on the Davis Cup team which represented England in 1914, losing to A. F. Wilding in the singles. With his brother, F. G. Lowe, he was a runner-up for the English doubles championship in the same year.

A. E. Beamish is also a veteran, having paired with J. C. Parke in 1912 and 1913, and landed in second place in the English doubles event each year. He has evidently gone off badly in his game, for he was the weak spot in the challenging team yesterday, and is not entrusted with a place in the singles. Altogether, the odds are strongly in favor of an Australian victory today, for Patterson is the type of player that the British base-line drivers cannot successfully resist, and his success alone will be enough to clinch matters, with the record of his past victory over Kingscote in his favor.

Murphy Goes to Minneapolis.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 19.—Bob Murphy, an outfielder, has been purchased from the Washington Americans by the local American Association Baseball Club.

TO SETTLE SQUASH TITLE.

Yale and Harvard Clubs Battle Today for Metropolitan Honors.

This year's squash tennis championship in Class A of the Metropolitan League will be decided this afternoon at the Squash Club, Forty-second Street near Madison Avenue, by a play-off between the teams of the Yale and Harvard clubs. These two old rivals finished the Winter series last Tuesday in a tie, each having defeated every other club in the league, and dividing their own two meetings, Yale winning the first and Harvard the second. It was agreed to decide the club title on neutral courts, agreeable to both contenders, and Chairman A. G. Blaisdell of the schedule committee gave out the decision in favor of the Squash Club as the field of battle.

The two teams will line up by agreement as they did in the final matches played last Tuesday, when Yale defeated Columbia and Harvard won from the Princeton Squash Club combination. This will bring national champion John W. Appel, Jr., of Harvard against Auguste J. Cordier, the recent winner of the National Handicap Tournament. In the second bracket Anderson Dana, twice a runner-up for the national title, plays Alan Corey, the old Yale football and baseball star. The third pair comprises Eris S. Winston of Harvard, three times a national champion, and Livingston Platt. Next in line are Ralph G. Coburn of Harvard and C. J. MacGuire of Yale, who was runner-up in this year's Fall scratch tournament, and the list is completed by P. M. Morrison of Harvard and H. W. Carhart, the present Class B champion.

The matches will begin about 5 P. M.

BOLIN IN BROOKLYN GAMES.

Anatole Bolin, Swedish middle-distance champion and record-holder, has withdrawn from the 600-yard special invitation race, one of the leading events scheduled for the indoor athletic meet of the 106th Infantry Post, American Legion, at the 23d Regiment Armory, Brooklyn, Saturday night. Bolin, in his entry blank received yesterday, specified that he would compete in a half-mile handicap run, instead of the special race, to which he had been invited. In the half-mile event the Swedish star will probably compete from scratch. Marvin Gustafson, former national 600-yard champion, will also start in this race.

Jack Sellers, New York A. C., and Homer Baker, Glenoce A. C., will probably have a duel in the 600-yard invitation run, though there is a field of seven crack runners entered, including Elliot Ballestier and Arthur Reilly, Knights of St. Antony; Earl Eby, University of Pennsylvania, and F. L. Murray and W. I. L. Adams, Princeton.

Lieutenant Frank L. Stephenson, Chairman of the 106th Post's Athletic Committee, yesterday announced that the entries for the fourteen events scheduled had exceeded 400. Yale is represented in this huge entry with a team of sixteen men, including twelve athletes who will compete in the half-mile run. The open medley relay race has attracted eleven teams, including quartets from several important Eastern colleges. The University of Pennsylvania, Millrose A. A., Loughlin Lyceum, Knights of St. Antony, Paulist A. C., and Morningside A. C. are the leading contenders for this race. The Millrose quartet will include Mike Devaney, Sid Leslie, Fred Safarowic, and Charles Bluch. The Red and Blue of Pennsylvania will be carried by Sherman Landers, Robert Maxam, Earl Eby, and Larry Brown.

Will Break Water Polo Tie.

The deadlock for first place in the water polo competition of the Intercollegiate Swimming League will be broken tonight, when Columbia meets Princeton in the Columbia pool. Each has a clean slate for the year, with three victories and no reverses. In the swimming events, which will precede the water polo game, Princeton is the favorite on the season's records.

SAPPHIRE ADJUDGED BEST CAT IN SHOW

After lively competition, Sapphire, a beautiful blue specimen of feline aristocracy, was yesterday adjudged the best in the show at the eighteenth annual exhibition of the Atlantic Cat Club on the roof of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. Sapphire, which has a fitely molded head and a sleek coat, was accustomed to the honors thus heaped on him, for in the little more than six years of his existence he has been five times declared the best of the show. He is owned by Miss Elsie G. Hydon of Bogota, N. J., who is well known also as an exhibitor of dogs.

The Atlantic Cat Show was held for the benefit of the Bide-a-Wee Home for animals, and a good attendance, in spite of the bad weather, made the show profitable for the home. There were 125 cats in the exhibition, some from ancestors in Australia and Siam. They were also of many hues, with red, white and blue among them to give a patriotic touch.

The closest rival to Sapphire was his own son, Sunset Top Notch, owned by the Misses Champion of Staten Island. While they failed to win in the best of show, the Misses Champion took first in three of the classes. Their Sunset Invincible, a cream colored cat, was best of the Novice Class; their Sunset Peachbloom was adjudged best of the kittens, and their Argent Dazzle was best among the short-haired cats.

YALE DEFERS REPLY ON EUROPEAN TRIP

Awaits Letter from Cambridge Detailing Plans for Track Meet Next Spring.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 19.—Yale track athletic officials met tonight to discuss a cablegram from the Cambridge, England, Athletic Association stating that Yale's suggestion for a track meet in England next Summer was favorably received and that a letter from Oxford and Cambridge is on the way to present a plan for the proposed meet. The Yale undergraduate managers went over the situation in detail, and at the close of the session Captain Heffelfinger of the track team said that the officials hope heartily that the proposed plans can be put through.

Definite action will not be taken, however, until the arrival of the letter from the English universities. That will be acted upon by the Yale Undergraduate Athletic Association, the Faculty, and the Graduate Athletic Committee. It is now likely that the Yale track team will make the trip alone instead of being accompanied by any other American university, but the situation will remain uncertain until after the receipt of the letter from Cambridge and Oxford.

NAVY ATHLETES BUSY.

Meets in Many Branches of Sport During Next Two Months.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 19.—The Naval Academy gymnasts will have matches as follows this season: Feb. 14, University of Pennsylvania; Feb. 21, Massachusetts Tech; March 6, Harvard; March 10, Yale; March 13, Princeton. Massachusetts Tech is a new comer on the gym schedule, though its teams have met the Academy in swimming and fencing.

The boxing dates are: Feb. 21, Pennsylvania State; Feb. 28, University of Pennsylvania. This will complete the schedule for the first season.

With basket ball continuing through the first part of the month, and with the gymnasium, boxing, wrestling, swimming, and fencing matches against leading colleges, a remarkable program of sports will be presented during February and the first half of March. There will be four or five events on each Saturday during that period.

PALL MALL
FAMOUS CIGARETTES

How it happened—

"Have one."

"Light another."

"Fill your case," punctuated every conversation on the transports going over.

Captain X had taken with him a liberal supply of Pall Mall famous cigarettes (plain ends). By the time he landed they were gone.

"Over There" he couldn't have a favorite brand. But the cigarettes he was lucky enough to get had one feature that gave him a big idea. They were round and smoked freely.

Back in America once more the Captain came and gave us his idea,—a big idea. He suggested that we make Pall Mall cigarettes round in shape, loosely rolled and plain end—a cigarette that does not have to be tapped, squeezed or loosened, a cigarette with a free and easy draught.

A cigarette made from the famous Pall Mall blend of 42 Turkish tobaccos chosen for richness and delicacy of flavor.

THE PLAY

By Alexander Woollcott

The Harvard Prize Play.

Henry Marchant.....George La Guere
Eva Orris.....Ida St. Léon
Mrs. Marchant.....Katherine Kaelred
Mrs. Orris.....Effie Shannon
Dr. Brent Janson.....Robert Edeson
Mrs. Bundy.....Amelia Bingham

Take "Le Malade Imaginaire" from the theatre of Molière or any other play on the wiles of the hypochondriac. Tap the vein of comedy that ran through "The Mollusc" of blessed memory. Add a smattering from the lore of the psychoanalyst. Stir violently and you will have the deft, original and uncommonly entertaining piece which, under the clumsy and inept title of "Mamma's Affair," arrived last evening at the reopened Little Theatre.

Or let us call it the Somewhat Larger Theatre, for the onetime precious playhouse has been expanded to less intimate dimensions. In the days of the Winthrop Ames régime, it was just about big enough on opening nights to admit the Four Hundred, but with a couple of hundred seats added, Oliver Morosco had to let down the bars, which he certainly did. A curiously mixed audience was present, then, to applaud with a splendid impartiality both the very good acting and the very bad acting, jumbled together in the screamingly mixed cast of "Mamma's Affair."

This is the Harvard Prize Play, for which Mr. Morosco, rather than Mr. Craig, offered the prize this year, and the new comedy by one Rachel Barton Butler is, by a considerable margin, the best product of English 47 yet sent from the cloistered halls of Cambridge to try its luck in the hurly-burly of the commercial theatre. There is no more interesting comedy on view in New York today, and, if it were as well played as it deserves to be, there would be few so well worth going to see. As it is, you'd better see it. You might do a whole lot worse.

It required at least a surface knowledge of the Freudian explorations to write this play and playgoers with a bit of that knowledge will have the time of their lives as it unfolds. It is true that the Freudian playgoer lies in wait for the slightest lurking excuse to descend into the subconscious—discovering clues and symptoms of which playwright, producer, and players are blissfully unaware. He sees an inhibition at every turn and with the slightest encouragement would talk about the Psycho-Analysis of Xenophon. But "Mamma's Affair" really invites his special attention.

It is all about the Oedipus complex. Or what is it called when the ingrowing bond is between mother and daughter? The Medea complex? Well, no matter—for, after all, the common, unread run of us can relish the new piece at the Little Theatre and, as its somewhat uncomfortable story develops, will wriggle and chuckle with many a spasm of recognition.

Miss (or Mrs.) Butler's play is all about a docile daughter, whose mother, wallowing in her bravely borne invalidism, has affectionately and sentimentally—using her uncomprehending daughter until the latter is a self-denying, tortured neurasthenic. Mamma, in the sweetest, most self-deprecating way imaginable, has the vapors upon all occasions, and even, if needs must, swoons away in order to keep things moving just the way she wants them to. Things would go on this way forever if the daughter were not driven beyond her strength, and suddenly, in a complete nervous collapse, her love for her mother turns to bitter and spasmodic repudiation.

It is only a momentary spasm, but it lasts long enough to bring a wise and resolute doctor into the case. He sees through Mamma at one glance and vigorously cuts away her vinelike clutch upon the daughter. He weans the daughter from Mamma, from Mamma's friend, and from the nice young man Mamma has picked out for a son-in-law. He keeps her isolated long enough for her to develop, for once, a mind of her own. Also long enough for her to fall in love with him. And he with her. But of course you knew that.

Having a few embarrassing ethics about the premises, he is all for packing her off then, but that mind of her own has not been developed to no purpose. It is Miss Butler's purpose and is revealed in the clutch of the final curtain.

The cast of characters reads like the role of an old home week celebration, so many are the dear, remembered faces. Effie Shannon, Amelia Bingham, Robert Edeson, Katherine Kaelred—they're all here. Miss Shannon is delightful to behold and plays capitally the rôle of the languishing Mamma. Mr. Edeson is excellent, and Miss Bingham—as the Irish nurse—although often on the verge of considering herself in the presence of a big moment in a big play—adds considerably to the entertainment, even when she forgets and leaves her brogue up in her dressing-room.

Miss Kaelred is pretty bad, and the same must be said of George La Guere. Neither of them, with all their various accomplishments, appears to possess much of the comic spirit or any of the technique necessary for the touch of travesty in which the piece, in the present production, is invested. Then the use of the arrestingly adult Little Billy as a child in downright distressing.

Over against all these blemishes in the cast must be set the skillful and pleasing performance by Ida St. Leon, who may be described as a Ruth Chatterton with salt, an actress of circus ancestry, and "Polly of the Circus" memories, whose spirited, intelligent, and appreciative playing bequeathes a deal of vitality to "Mamma's Affair."

Officers of the Cretic Celebrate.

Schumann Club Sings 21 Songs.

The Schumann Club sang in English its namesake composer's "Song of the Bride," with others of Grieg and of Russian masters, in opening its seventh season last evening at Aeolian Hall. Deems Taylor, who assisted at the piano, had arranged for women's voices all the twenty-one songs chosen by Mr. Stephens, the conductor. The fifty singers were heard to good effect in graceful Italian pieces by a modern song writer, Donaudy, in antique style, as well as in mediæval and modern French, and two airs by Cecil Forsyth and Edna Park.

Two Plays to Be Reviewed Later.

Two new plays were presented last night in addition to those reviewed in THE TIMES this morning. They were "The Ruined Lady" at the Playhouse, and "The Power of Darkness" at the Garrick Theatre.

The former is a comedy by Frances Nordstrom, of which Grace George is the star.

Both of these productions will be reviewed later.

Beginning in the calm after a storm of Italian violence, or the violence that is supposed in much fiction to be characteristic of the Italian race, and continuing then through storm and calm until its final ending in a "great peace," Otis Skinner's new play, "Pietro," came to the Criterion Theatre last night. The co-authors of the play are Maud Skinner, the star's wife, and Jules Eckert Goodman, but the original author of the work is undoubtedly Mr. Skinner himself. Mrs. Skinner and Mr. Goodman wrote the play. It may be assumed that they composed every line of it. But they wrote so expressly for Otis Skinner, with him and his acting so constantly in mind, that he may be said to have been Pietro before they put Pietro in a play. The work is above all else an Otis Skinner vehicle, and one in which he will probably ride far and wide over these United States.

The scene of the prologue is the antechamber of a court house in Pennsylvania in 1896. In a moment it is made evident that a poor Italian has been tried for the murder of his wife. The jury is about to bring in its verdict. The evidence has shown that the Italian had two loves, his dog and his baby daughter. His wife killed the dog and attacked the child. He attacked her, then, with a knife, and when they found him later he was covered with blood and his wife was missing. He did not know whether he had killed her or not. He had fallen and become unconscious while pursuing her. Her body, it was thought, may have fallen into the river, and he is about to be convicted or acquitted of her murder.

When the first act begins it is eighteen years later. With his name changed to Peter Barban, Pietro Barbano is a prosperous Californian, owning a great estate, in partnership with Alfred Payton, a Luther Burbank among plants. The daughter has grown into a beautiful young girl, still the idol of her father's heart—and all are happy, despite the undesirable publicity that has been forced upon them. This publicity, of course, leads to trouble—this and the fact that the son of the District Attorney who prosecuted Pietro Barbano is in love with Angela, Pietro's bambina at 22.

The general trend, if not all of the details, of what follows may be surmised by any one. The mother returns, the District Attorney arrives, Pietro's identity is disclosed, the card house of happiness is wrecked—and then the "great peace."

It is all very obvious, rather old-fashioned for Broadway, and sometimes deliberately old-fashioned, yet, despite these things, it is incensely humorous generally, and dramatic in certain scenes. This is chiefly due to Mr. Skinner's impersonation. Beginning as an Italian who cannot speak English, and ending as an Italian who has learned English and acquired wealth, or had it thrust upon him, he is always alternately the tempestuous and tender man whose life is ruled by loves and hates. He loves and hates without restraint, but not blindly, for he loves the true and beautiful, and hates the false and ugly, is always lovable. Mr. Skinner's impersonation of this character is the best thing in the play, though the characterization of Payton, by O. B. Clarence, and that of the unlovely Teresa, Pietro's wife, by Mary Shaw, are distinctive. Ruth Rose, as Angela, is a daughter Pietro might love as he did.

The first act of the play is its weakest. It drags because every one knows the nature of what is coming, yet the beginning of the assured complications is postponed while the characters introduce themselves and make detailed preparations for the coming events, whose shadows are apparent from the time the curtain goes down on the prologue. The second act brings things immediately to a crisis, however, and from then until the end of the third there is little except grim fright.

The audience last night was enthusiastic, and insisted upon a few words from Mr. Skinner. He thanked them and explained that he would summon the authors if it were not for the fact that one of them was out of New York and the other "dying of fright out front somewhere." She had frequently died of fright, he said, so he felt he could speak for her.

A History of the Theatre in America

The only complete history of the American stage from its beginnings to the present time.

By ARTHUR HORNBLOW

JOHN RANKEN TOWSE, who, since the death of William Winter, is the leading theatrical authority in the United States, says of this work:

"The chief and very positive value of these two handsome volumes is that they relate in something like chronological order the various stages in the development of the American theatre from the earliest days to the present time, thus providing in a shape peculiarly convenient for reference information which hitherto could be obtained only by search in many different sources. . . . . The work has been carefully and judiciously done and, for the casual reader at any rate, will supply the place of a good-sized dramatic library. . . . As a conscientious, well-made and convenient summary of the recorded facts in the theatrical history of the United States, of the personality and achievements of the men and women who helped to make it and of contemporaneous opinion, the book undoubtedly supplies a want and is sure to find its place on many library shelves. Its index makes it valuable for ready reference, while its excellent and often rare illustrations are a great attraction. . . . In his final review of the present lamentable conditions of the stage and their causes Mr. Hornblow is entirely just."—Evening Post (New York).

MUSIC

By Richard Aldrich

Mme. Fremstad's Recital.

Mme. Olive Fremstad, for years one of the most notable figures in the Metropolitan Opera Company, who has not let New York hear her voice for several seasons, appeared yesterday afternoon in a song recital in Aeolian Hall. The hall was filled with an audience that was determined to let the singer realize that old memories had not been effaced. She was demonstratively greeted when she first appeared, and all through the recital it was made plain that she held the interest and attention of the audience by the charm and power of her singing, and the fascinating personality behind it.

Her program included some characteristic and unfamiliar songs. After pieces in the old style by Salvator Rosa, Martini (not the padre of that name), and French and Italian folksongs, she sang, in Norwegian, songs by Grieg, Jordan, and Backer-Lunde; among by Novak, and in Russian two by Rachmaninoff; a Spanish folksong arranged by Schindler, and songs in French and English.

Mme. Fremstad's voice is not all it used to be in quality or evenness through its scale. It still has power and dramatic expressiveness. Its high tones are seldom agreeable. Its quality had always something of reediness rather than of velvety smoothness; but it had, and has, vitality, shades of expressiveness, varieties of color; and Mme. Fremstad's dramatic gifts are such as to impart great significance to many moods of music expressed in song. In the beginning her voice was somewhat unsteady; it improved in this respect before she had got far. Unfortunately her diction, at least in English, was far from clear. Her most successful attempts were not in the old songs but in the modern ones, though the "brunette" of the seventeenth century she sang with great charm. Grieg's long and dramatically conceived "Vug, o Vove," is not one of his most interesting compositions. Mme. Fremstad was quite as successful in Jordan's light and delicate "Baekken," which she had to repeat, and Backer-Lunde's brilliant "Scherzo," as in the more serious pieces.

A curious composition is Rachmaninoff's "Fate," inscribed "To Beethoven's Fifth Symphony"; a long poem of philosophical import, set to music in which the opening "motto" phrase of the symphony is much used; and though sung with much fervor by Mme. Fremstad, not of striking or sustained interest.

Orville Harrold in "Cavalleria."

The chief distinction of the performance of "Cavalleria Rusticana," that preceded one of "Le Coq d'Or" at the Metropolitan Opera House last evening, was the impersonation of Turiddu by Orville Harrold, who took the part for the first time at this operat house. Not only his singing was remarkably fine in its power and quality, in the beauty of its tone and the dramatic expression he gave it, but his acting filled the part with more of the significance of the character than has for a considerable time been observed in performances of Mascagni's well-worn opera at the Metropolitan. The esteem in which Mr. Harrold is held by the audience has been steadily and deservedly increased since he appeared here first at the beginning of the present season.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"Big Game," the play by Willard Robertson and Kilbourn Gordon, which was announced to open at the Fulton Theatre this evening, will not open until tomorrow evening.

"Trimmed in Scarlet," a comedy by William Hurlbut, with Maxine Elliott in the leading role, opened at the Shubert-Belasco Theatre in Washington last night. It will go to Baltimore next week, and then at the Maxine Elliott Theatre here.

Among those who will support Sam Bernard and Irene Bordoni in "As You Were," which opens at the Central Theatre next Monday evening, will be Minerva Coverdale, Clifton Webb, Hugh Cameron, Ruth Donnelly, Stanley Harrison and Frank Mayne.

"The Girl in the Limousine" will end its engagement at the Elitinge Theatre on Jan. 31. It will be succeeded by Florence Moore in "Breakfast in Bed."

Sam Moore, described as "the hand-saw wizzard," was added to the cast of the Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic last night.

ITALIAN RUSH TO AMERICA.

U. S. Consuls Investigate Records of All Would-Be Emigrants.

NAPLES, Jan. 19.—Italians who have been to Russia and those who have been arrested on any charge whatever are unable to get past the American Consuls in Italian cities, who are exercising the strictest surveillance of passport visés to prevent Bolsheviki and anarchists from returning to the United States on the wave of emigration which is moving toward America as rapidly as ships can carry the emigrants.

The number demanding visés exceeds the transportation capacity so greatly that the American officials are turning down all doubtful cases, passing only those thoroughly literate and of good character. Certificates are required from courts that the applicant for a visé has never been arrested and also a certificate that no charge is pending against him. In the case of a soldier his discharge papers must show his record.

The Consuls take ample time to investigate all questionable cases. The passport fees are producing a tremendous income at the seaport Consulates. The Naples Consulate will probably clear $100,000 above expenses this year.

PALMER DENIES BILL HITS LABOR'S RIGHTS

WANTS ADDITIONAL POWERS

Asserts the Government Will Be Unable to Check Reds Unless the Laws Are Strengthened.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Attorney General Palmer informed Representative P. H. Campbell, Chairman of the House Rules Committee, today that the Sedition bill recently reported by the Judiciary Committee did not contravene the Constitution or abridge the right of free speech. He also denied that organized labor had anything to fear from legislation intended to prevent radicals from preaching doctrines dangerous to good government.

Mr. Palmer said that he desired to appear before the committee Thursday, and hoped to show that the legislation proposed was actually necessary, and that unless the Federal Government was given stronger laws it would be unable to check the "Red" movement.

Mr. Palmer said that there was a strong propaganda in this country at present to prevent the passage of legislation against radicals. The propaganda, he said, was having an effect upon members of Congress facing re-election. When he appears before the committee Mr. Palmer declared he would expose the propaganda and analyze the pending bills and explain the weakness of the present laws.

"Unless the Government is given additional powers to combat the radicals it will find itself helpless when the war actually ends," said Mr. Palmer.

Strong opposition has developed to the Sedition bill through the efforts of organized labor. According to a member of a leading labor organization, the conservative American labor man is not opposed to a strong sedition law. The opposition, he declared, exists only among the radicals and so-called leaders opposing the pending bills who desire to stand in with the radicals and the I. W. W.

Other officials of the Department of Justice engaged in investigating crime against the Government will also appear before the committee and explain the necessity for prompt enactment of stronger sedition laws.

SUBWAY HEARING TODAY.

"Mid-Manhattan" Loop to be Urged by Board of Trade.

Advocates of five plans for extending the subway service from the Grand Central station westward will be heard this afternoon by Transit Construction Commissioner John H. Delaney. The Thirty-fourth Street Board of Trade will urge a loop that would encircle the shopping, hotel and theatre district. This is called the "Mid-Manhattan Plan," and calls for operation of subway trains on the southerly track in Forty-second Street from Times Square to the Grand Central, south on a new track paralleling the present southbound local track to Thirty-third Street, thence west in a new tube in Thirtieth Street to the Seventh Avenue line, and thence north on a new track paralleling the present northbound local track through the Pennsylvania station to Times Square. An alternate plan urges the use of the present southbound local track between the Grand Central and Thirty-third Street, and the present northbound local track between the Pennsylvania station and Times Square, and have trains operate only in one direction.

Other plans call for the extension of the Queensboro subway direct to Times Square, the extension of the Hudson tubes north from Thirty-third Street to Times Square, and the establishment of an express station stop at Thirty-third Street on the Fourth Avenue line. There are also plans for a moving platform between Times Square and the Grand Central, with stairways at the intervening Avenues, and a no-stop service between Fourteenth Street on the east side of Seventy-second on the west west side.

STUD POKER ROW IN COURT.

Karp Sues Krohnberg, He Sues Mack, and Coler Awaits Result.

Pending the outcome of a suit brought yesterday by Hyman Karp against Louis Krohnberg, a manufacturer, of 303 Fifth Avenue, in which Karp alleges he paid more than $25,000 in gambling losses to Krohnberg, action probably will be delayed on the request of Bird S. Coler, Commissioner of Charities, that the Corporation Counsel institute a civil suit against Krohnberg to recover $1,750,000—five times the amount of Krohnberg's alleged stud poker winnings from friends. The Corporation Counsel believes that the strength of his case depends largely on the outcome of such individual suits against the manufacturer.

Krohnberg, who, through Max D. Steurer, his attorney, has denied Broadway rumors that he won more than $300,000 with marked cards, yesterday filed suit for $5,000, the amount of an alleged unrepaid loan, against John H. Mack of 525 Fifth Avenue, one of the participants in the stud poker tournament. William Travers Jerome, attorney for Mack, filed a notice of appearance.

A participant in the game said Mack borrowed the money "for a purpose which will be divulged later."

NANTUCKET ICEBOUND.

BOSTON, Jan. 19.—Nantucket Island has been ice bound since Friday, when the last boat for the mainland left there.

A message from the Siasconset wireless station today said Nantucket Harbor was blocked with ice and was still freezing with a sharp westerly gale prevailing.

A steamer today continued her efforts to break a way through the ice to the island. The ice pack stretched well across Vineyard Sound and choked the Cape Cod Canal. The Cross Rip Shoals lightship was surrounded by ice, with the wind blowing fifty miles an hour and some concern was expressed here for the crew. An offshore movement of the ice pack would expose her crew to the fate of their predecessors, who were swept to sea and never heard from when the ice moved out two years ago.

OLD "RUDDIGORE" REVIVED.

Gilbert and Sullivan's Ghost-Lore Opera Applauded at the Park.

At the opening of "Ruddigore" at the Park Theatre last evening there was something of that suspense that we read was thick about the Savoy Theatre in London thirty-three years ago when Gilbert and Sullivan announced a new opera to follow the unheardof long run of "The Mikado." "Ruddigore" came to America soon afterward for a short run, and until last night, so far as the record runneth, it has not be heard again. The audience which heard "Ruddigore" last night probably looked upon it in another light than that earlier one which actually booed at spots. Last night there were no boos. There was a lot of applause and people were straining their eyes over their texts in the semi-darkness of the house. In the thirty years Gilbert and Sullivan have got on the shelf with the classics. There is no longer any question of a success or a failure. There is only the question of "What is it like?"

The inquisitive temper of the audience was clear last night. For the most part it must have departed richly rewarded and aside from curiosity satisfied there must be a generous share of admiration for the work. First for the Sullivan score, which rises frequently to high points and runs along delightfully smooth. Once indeed it reaches a truly remarkable quality in the ghost song: "The dead of the night's high noon." He is a real spectre air, a perfectly hollow, bodiless melody, it seems, and strangely beautiful in coloring. "The old oak tree" ballad, and Mad Meg's song of "To a garden full of posies" might also be mentioned as a first choice of a much larger number of things in Sullivan's best style.

Gilbert called "Ruddigore" a "supernatural opera," and it is that solely in a Gilbertian sense. It is a ghost story of the days when ghosts were content to follow the best traditions of Elsinore, before they were made jumpy by an army of ouija fiends. The most remembered feature of the story is the picture gallery which comes to life and the dead, wicked baroneta of Ruddigore walk the boards—a scene which Sullivan has set to magnificent music. Perhaps the public does not care for ghosts, and therein may be the reason "Ruddigore" has rested so long forgotten. But these are highly respectable ghosts, like all other Gilbertian characters, and there is no reason why they should not be admitted to better acquaintance.

The story of "Ruddigore" has already been told in these pages. As for last night's performance, it was one that passed reasonably high expectations. Miss Caldwell was Rose Maybud, Mr. Danforth was Sir Despard Murgatroyd, happily released from being a wicked baronet; Miss Tracy was Mad Meg, Frank Moulam was Robin Redapple, Mr. Campbell was Richard Dauntless, an excellent sailor; Miss Edwards was Dame Hannah, and Mr. Waterous, the long dead Sir Roderick, who comes to life and sings the magnificent, "Dead of the Night's High Noon." The chorus of professional bridesmaids, on duty every day from 10 to 4, and forever breaking out into "Hail the Bridegroom, Hail the Bride," should have a special place of honor in any account of the performance.

Those who are confessedly Gilbert and Sullivan enthusiasts and those who admire excellent music and dialogue that long since has won its own adjective of Gilbertian will find "Ruddigore" crammed full of it, and they are invited to say whether in the thirty years since it was first given there has been anything better in English light opera—outside of the other Gilbert and Sullivan works.

GROCERS WON'T TAKE 25%.

Col. Carson Says Retailers Refused to Sell Army Food on That Basis.

Public Markets Commissioner Edwin J. O'Malley said yesterday that New York would be represented in Washington this week with eight other cities, who are to send delegates to urge concerted action to curb profiteering. Mr. O'Malley will probably attend the conference himself. He explained that the expiration of the Lever Act would mean practically that there would be no official control of foodstuffs. It is to obtain adequate legislation that the meeting will be held in Washington.

Colonel J. M. Carson, zone supply officer of the army, reported to Federal Food Administrator William Tyndale that the retail grocers in New York City have refused to handle surplus foods at a margin of 25 per cent. of their investment. Colonel Carson said that he still hoped to dispose of the surplus army foods here in a manner that would give the ultimate consumer the advantage of the low prices.

In connection with his investigation into the recent army food sales, Commissioner of Accounts Hirshfield yesterday sent a letter to many of the volunteer workers at the army food sales, asking them to testify as to their service. A petition of 900 volunteers was recently presented to Mayor Hylan and by him forwarded to Commissioner Hirshfield for investigation.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Pressure distribution over the United States, including Alaska, is such as to indicate a continuance of the prevailing low temperature over the central and northern portions of the country east of the Rocky Mountains, and after the eastward passage of the low pressure area now over the Rocky Mountain region, there will be a still further fall in the temperature that will reach the Atlantic Coast by Wednesday night or Thursday morning. The low temperatures will also extend over northern and central districts west of the Rocky Mountains and may be expected to continue generally for some time.

In the South no unusually low temperatures are now indicated.

Snows were central during the last twenty-four hours from the lake region and Upper Ohio Valley eastward and also in the Upper Mississippi Valley and the Northwest. Elsewhere fair weather prevailed, with temperatures much above the seasonal average in the South. There will be snow by Tuesday night in the upper lake region and rain or snow in the Lower Ohio Valley, continuing Wednesday and extending during Tuesday night and Wednesday through the lower lake region and the Upper Ohio Valley.

There will be snow Wednesday in the New England and the Middle Atlantic States and probably rain by Wednesday in Tennessee and the East Gulf States. Cold wave warnings have been ordered for west and extreme south Montana, Southwest South Dakota, and north Wyoming.

Winds off Atlantic Coast: North of Sandy Hook, Sandy Hook to Hatteras, fresh possibly moderate to strong northwest, clearing weather; Hatteras to Florida Straits, moderate, mostly southwest, except northeast and east off South Florida Coast, fair; East Gulf Coast, moderate, mostly south, fair; West Gulf Coast, moderate southeast and south, partly cloudy, possibly some fog over north portion.

Moderate disturbances off North New England Coast, moving east.

FORECAST, TODAY AND WEDNESDAY.

Opening Postponed Again.

One postponement after another seems to be the fate of the Fall (1920) opening of the leading factor in the woolen market. Report has it that the delays have been caused by a desire to see the outcome of the present investigation being made into prices and profits. The date for the opening has been placed, it is said, for Jan. 26, but it is not so certain that it may not be moved another week forward. The investigation of costs and prices now being made occurs at a time rather favorable to the big company. It was explained yesterday by a market representative that very small profits will be shown on the goods now being delivered, owing to the fact that orders were accepted at very low prices compared with the present cost of stock and labor. An investigation based on samples of goods for the coming season, it was said, might show something different.

Anxious Over Overcoat Prices.

The manufacturing clothiers are frank in admitting their anxiety over the possibilities presented by overcoat prices for next Fall. Whether the public will want to pay prices that will have to be asked is the problem confronting the manufacturers. It was pointed out yesterday that $70 will have to be asked for overcoats that sold this season at $50. Overcoats, from a price angle, it was also explained, offer more difficulties than suits. On the latter the advances cover two seasons, whereas the increases on overcoats come abruptly once a year.

Laces for French Show.

For the exhibition of French Arts and Industries, to be opened at the Bush Terminal Sales Building on Feb. 2, there will be a collection of laces gathered on a trip through France made by a representative of the exhibition, who visited a number of small villages. He reports that the quaint household industries have been revived in Belgium and France to a large extent, and the women are working industriously to supply a demand that is quite large. A small package of laces received for the show recently is valued at $25,000 and included a Point d'Aiguille scarf priced at $1,000. Another of the exhibits will be paper weights consisting of real butterflies mounted in glass.

Sensible Styles Promised.

The designer for a prominent Chicago clothing house, visiting this city, said yesterday that the coming Fall season will see a return to sensible and comfortable clothing styles. While he expects quite a change in overcoat designs the principal effort, he said, will be along the line of presenting variety and less showy models. The same thing will be true of suits, he declares. Trousers will show a little more width and be cut straight instead of in the narrowed designs.

Gift Shops Successful.

The gift shop idea is a comparatively new one for most parts of the South but according to those acquainted with conditions there, it has been very well received. One State, it was pointed out, was but one shop of the sort. Another has opened up less than three months ago in another city, and speedily outgrew its first modest site. It was explained that in any section where there are many homes the demand for Gift articles is a large one. The season is a fairly well rounded one, with the Christmas holidays the best period. Valentine Day, Easter, and Mother's Day, however, furnish other good buying periods.

Women's Belt Vogue Spreading.

The vogue for women's narrow leather belts is improving. Some handlers of these goods who had been looking for a little slackening of the demand for them, have got an agreeable shock on looking over the orders turned in for Spring by men now on the road. At least one concern is investing its entire manufacturing facilities to making them. The most favored widths range from half an inch to an inch and a half. One of the features of the present demand is the increasing call for white belts although the bulk of the business is done in black, in both calf and patent leather finishes.

Not Anxious to Price Sweaters.

Attempts that are being made by jobbing concerns and the big small order houses to get manufacturers of woolen's novelty sweaters to commit themselves on Fall prices for these goods have met with little, if any, success so far. The reason given by the manufacturers for their unwillingness to quote on them at present is the positive assertion that they intend in their intention to hold off as long as possible by the certainty, as they assume, of a material difference between the cost of yarns now being bought and those that will be used in the production of the garments. Leaders in the concerns approached say that they will be able to tell about twice as many garments as they will be able to make.

Moire Silk Bag Sales Gaining.

One of the features of the season's Spring in the increasing demand for moire silk bags principally in black, navy, brown and taupe. The popular bags which are contained in the new lines are those that open at the top and are fitted with frames. The retailers around 33 Avenue, which is an excellent demand is reported for the so-called swagger and kodak effects in Morocco and crepe cloth leathers, chiefly in black and brown. Both of these bags are in the flap and snap variety, the fascinating being spell down the front with the name. The complaint against loss by a long printed flap. Equipped with mirror, purse, &c., the swagger bag will retail around $2.50 and the kodak bag at $3 or there-about.

"Porcupine (bird) breast" has come into style. It is looked upon in the millinery trade as one of the smartest of the new styles in wings that are used to cover facings of women's Spring hats as employed in large effects across the front brims. The plumage is so pasted that the "quills" look not unlike a little picket fence. It is reported as being particularly good for facing rolling types of sailor hats, as well as for facing small models of soft felt or of crepe de lantre. In one of its most attractive uses it is seen here in a combination of blue and white, as a facing for a slightly rolled sailor hat of navy milan.

Gray Goods Sales Light.

Trading was limited in the local market for gray goods yesterday, with the bulk of the business confined to goods wanted for delivery during the current month. Despite the inactivity of buyers, prices advanced to new high levels on three of the four printcloth constructions that got the most attention. January sales of 38½-inch 80-48s were reported at 22 cents, of 39-inch 60-52s at 23 cents, of 39-inch 68-72s at 27 cents and of 38½-inch 64-60s at 24 cents. The prices paid for all but the 64-60s set new records. Sheetings, fine-yarn goods and the cloth-bag numbers had a quiet day.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Denzil General Skinner has cabled to the Department of Commerce from London that since the first of this year five shipments of sugar, aggregating 5,183,820 pounds, have been forwarded from Great Britain to the United States. The value of the five consignments was $300,000.

George A. Schaefer, who has had fifteen years' experience in the jewelry trade, the last twenty-two of which were spent with C. G. Sweet & Sons Company, has joined the sales force of the jewelry and silverware division of the Samuel Sachs Company, Chicago Mail Order Co., 368 8th Av.

Leopold Hirsch, who was credit and discount manager for I. Greenman Sons & Co., cotton goods, 508 Broadway, has been elected to membership in the firm.

Robert Sois & Co. have put into effect a plan whereby employes may become stockholders in the concern. Opportunity is given to pay for the stock over a period of five years, helped by a special bonus provided by the company for the purpose.

Radiaknit

A Creation—not an imitation

The first impression of Radiaknit is of great lustre and beauty of colour tonjng. Radiaknit in performance of continued wear is even greater joy. Close association with this unique textile breeds a "fabric-love" that nothing can replace.

That—and because it handles well and does not curl upon the table—is why all regard it as "the" silk jersey cloth.

NINETY NEW CASES OF INFLUENZA IN CITY

Reports to Health Department Show an Increase Over Number on Saturday.

DR. COPELAND NOT ALARMED

Ninety cases of influenza were reported yesterday to the Health Department as against 50 cases reported on Saturday. Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Health Commissioner, said that if the disease increased in this city he would not close the public schools nor would he use masks, as was done in some other cities when the disease was last epidemic. It was his intention, he said, to follow the same course of procedure as was followed here in the last fight with the disease.

Seven persons died of the disease on Sunday as against three on Saturday. The number of deaths from pneumonia was 36, a decrease of 4 from the death reported on Saturday.

The French liner Lorraine arrived yesterday from Havre with six cases of Spanish influenza on board and reported one death from pneumonia following the disease on Jan. 15. The death was that of Mrs. Anna Novack, wife of Michael Novack, an ex-soldier of the American army who was on the ship and brought the body home for burial. Their home is at 2,357 Lyon Avenue, Westchester.

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—Six hundred nurses, operating from eight dispensaries, today began a survey of the city to aid in relief measures, and plans were made to augment this force tomorrow.

Health Commissioner John Dill Robertson today started a campaign against "cold flat" owners, when 105 complaints were received. An inquiry will be made into each complaint, and where sickness is found, action to bring about improved heat supply will be taken, Dr. Robertson said.

The Health Commissioner of Evanston reported that influenza cases today increased 30 per cent., and that 300 persons were ill there. Other neighboring towns reported slight increases.

POLICEMAN EXPOSES BIG POLICE ROBBERY

GOODS TAKEN IN AUTO TRUCK.

One Stood Guard While Others Bound Watchman and Ransacked Warehouse.

Herman Crouse, a patrolman attached to the Atlantic Avenue Precinct, in Brooklyn, was put on trial yesterday before Justice Isaac M. Kapper in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn. He is alleged to have been one of a gang that robbed the building of Starobin & Dubin, dealers in furs, on Nov. 30 last, and stole $15,000 worth of skins. Peter Rueger, also a patrolman attached to the same precinct, and under indictment for the same crime, who has turned State's evidence, was the principal witness called by District Attorney Harry E. Lewis to testify against his former companion.

Through questions put to the witnesses, it was learned yesterday for the first time, that "Benny" Sternberg, a character well known to the police and now a fugitive from justice, was indicted with the others for complicity in the Starobin Dubin robbery. Several years ago Sternberg was taken into custody as a suspect in the murder case of Mrs. Elsie Lee Hilair, who was strangled to death in the Hotel Martinique. The police were unable to fasten that crime upon Sternberg and he was released.

Policeman Rueger testified that Police Crouse suggested to him the idea of committing the burglary. He said that a number of conferences were held in a barber's shop in Fulton Street by Crouse, Sternberg, and himself. After the scheme was agreed upon, Edward Werle, a former convict, was selected as a good man to work out the details of the robbery. Later, he said, the services of Phillip Brown and Edward Cannon, the chauffeur, were enlisted. They are also under indictment.

On the night of the robbery, Rueger, according to his story, acted as a lookout. The others went into the building and tied the watchman to a bed. The furs were carried to an automobile truck, and taken to the store of Samuel Singer, on Ellery Street. Singer is under indictment for receiving stolen goods. Later, they were removed to West Twenty-sixth Street. Rueger told of several gatherings at the home of Werle, at 103 Charles Street, Manhattan, where the intended robbery was discussed.

Mrs. Hattie Werle, who, as Mrs. Hattie Kane, acted as housekeeper for Werle, and who was married to him last week while he was out of jail for a few hours on a habeas corpus writ, was called by the District Attorney as a witness for the prosecution. She told of the gatherings at the home of Werle and said that Crouse was the first of the gang to come there. Later Rueger and Sternberg were brought there. She testified that the gang played pinochle and poker. She did not know when or where Werle met the others. She was excused as a witness late in the afternoon, but was requested to be present again today, when the trial will be continued.

WOMAN LEAPS OFF LINER.

Officers of the Lorraine Report Storms All Way from France.

Officers of the French liner Lorraine, which arrived yesterday from Havre, reported that the vessel had encountered head winds and high seas from the hour she left the mouth of the Gironde Jan. 9 until she reached Quarantine on Sunday night and that on Jan. 15 a woman passenger in the steerage jumped overboard and was lost.

One of the 146 passengers in the first cabin was Marc Peter, the new Swiss Minister to Washington, accompanied by his wife. Mr. Peter was a lawyer at Geneva.

E. Walter Spevak of Philadelphia, who has just returned from a trip to Jugoslavia, said he was arrested for taking a picture of destroyed fortresses near Belgrade, arrested also in a small town as a Bolshevik and kept in prison until an officer from Belgrade explained to the commandant that Mr. Spevak was an American.

After coming from France with his grandmother to see his uncle, Adrien Philipot of West Hoboken, Jean Syda, 3½ years old, was denied admission to the United States by the Immigration authorities because his parents were not with him. His grandmother, Mme. Marguerite Genet, who has been in America before, explained that the boy was coming on a visit only. She showed papers signed by the boy's parents giving her full authority over him. The inspectors told her they would do their best with the authorities at Ellis Island to have him land. Another passenger was United States Senator Hollis of New Hampshire, a member of the United States Liquidation Committee.

CONFESSION MAY FREE BOY.

Three Arrests for Old Murder Thought to Clear Young Prisoner.

After spending ten months in jail awaiting trial on the charge of murder, William Hyde, twenty years old, of 1,006 Lafayette Avenue, Brooklyn, probably will be free in a few days as the result of a confession the police say they have obtained from one of three young sailors rounded up in the last few days and charged with the crime. The man murdered was Samuel Welchok, who was shot in his stationery store at 208 Wyckoff Avenue, Brooklyn, on March 11, 1919, by one of the two young men who came in to buy tobacco.

Hyde and another were arrested four days later, but the other suspect soon was released. Recently Jess Walker, twenty years old, of Mattoon, Ill., was arrested on a holdup charge in Chicago. The Wyckoff Street address was found in a notebook in his pocket. The investigation which followed ended in a murder charge against Walker, Guy Nichols, 21 years old, a sailor on the U. S. Orpheus who was stationed at Norfolk when apprehended and Joseph F. Auth, 18 years old, a sailor attached to the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The police and the Kings County District Attorney say Auth confessed to guiding the two others to the stationery store with the holdup in view, although Auth has entered a pela of not guilty in police court.

CROOKS JEST WITH CHICAGO.

Rob Safe After Record-Breaking Night of Calm.

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—One arrest and one hold-up were the night record of the Chicago Police Department when business opened today.

"The town is dead," said a veteran police sergeant, when asked about the almost clean slate. "and I never knew such a thing to happen before."

The telephone bell rang. The sergeant listened.

JEWELS SELL FOR £1,000,000

LAUSANNE, Jan. 19.—The sale of the jewels owned by the late Princess Vera Lobonoff of Russia has been concluded, and nearly £1,000,000 were realized.

The official figures have not yet been published, but experts contend that the same jewels sold in London or New York would have reached such high prices.

PROTEST OUR INTERFERENCE

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—Warning that "the Government of the United States should not interfere with the domestic problems of a friendly power," was given today by the Rev. Louis Crooks, the Church of Ireland's (Protestant Episcopal) representative on the delegation of the Protestants from Ulster now touring this country, in addressing the Round Table, the Ministerial Association of the Episcopal Church.

When asked by the Right Rev. Sheldon M. Griswold, Suffragan Bishop of Chicago, what the solution to the problem was, he answered: "ten years of firm, impartial and honest administration of the law."

The Sinn Fein are through and through Bolsheviki, he said, "and we are dealing with Bolshevism."

"De Valera and his gang of bandits should be deported," said the Hon. William Cote, Member of Parliament, speaking at the Baptist meeting.

Another attack against the seekers of Irish independence was launched by the Rev. Mr. Harte, Pastor of Donegal Square Church, who was Pastor of Stephen's Green Church, Dublin, during the Easter rebellion, and was an eye witness of the Sinn Fein atrocities, as he termed them. He admonished his audience to drive the Sinn Fein leaders from this country in the same manner as we are doing to Soviet sympathizers

WOMEN PLAN FOR 1920.

Mayor's Committee to Press Americanizing and Help the Poor.

The Mayor's Committee of Women on Reconstruction and Relief, at a meeting presided over by Mrs. William Randolph Hearst in the Hall of Records yesterday, mapped ambitious plans for the current year. Acting upon the report of Mrs. William Einstein, Chairman of the Americanization Committee, that both young and old men found last year's gathering in the public schools a welcome substitute for the saloons, and that interest in such meetings had been widespread, it was decided this year to increase efforts to teach American citizenship and ideals.

The Fuel Committee reported itself busy distributing coal to the poor, having for that purpose a fund of $25,000, donated by the Mayor's Market Committee from its excess. Miss Elizabeth Marbury of the Milk for America Committee from its excess. Miss Elizabeth Marmothers with cheap milk, and giving it to them when necessary. Sara Graham Mulhall told of the work of the Social Service Committee and of its need for funds for immediate and temporary relief of cured drug addicts.

GIRL OLIVE VICTIM BETTER.

Patient Responds to Antitoxin and Will Probably Recover.

Concetta Delbene of 9,325 Hughes Avenue, the Bronx, who, with a 9-year-old brother, are the only surviving members of the family of Paul Delbene, poisoned by eating ripe olives in their home, was reported to be much improved at the Fordham Hospital yesterday. The girl, it is said, ate only one olive, and there was always hope for her life. She received an injection of the Graham antitoxin on Saturday at the same time that her uncle Dominick was treated. Dominick died within an hour after receiving the injection, but Concetta, the doctors said, responded splendidly. Unless complications set in she will soon be well.

Joseph Delbene, brother of Concetta, is in St. Mary's Hospital for Children, in West Thirty-fourth Street. The doctors doubt whether he ate any of the olives. He is still under observation, but so far has shown no symptoms of botulinus poisoning.

LEVITZKI

At Carnegie Hall, Tuesday Evening, January 20

HERE is a poet-pianist—one who sings his way through each number with a keen appreciation and thorough understanding; one who plays with the charm of a happy temperament—with a touch which may be like a thunderbolt or as the caress of raindrops. Rich and varied tone, exquisite rhythm and an impeccable technique are brought to serve the soul and heart and brains with which he plays.

The same delicate beauty, nobility and power which are heard in Levitzki's playing from the concert stage—the minutest shades of difference which mean so much in the interpretations of the great artists (without which no record of an artist's playing can be considered a true record), indeed, Levitzki's very self is found in the records which he has played exclusively for

The AMPICO
Reproducing Piano

Levitzki records for no other instrument. It is only on the Ampico, outside of his public appearances, that the playing of this marvelous artist may be heard.

LEVITZKI WRITES:

"For a number of years, I have been keenly interested in the possibilities of the Reproducing Piano. I believe I have heard them all, not once, but many times, but until I heard the Ampico, I never found one that I thought adequately reproduced the artist's playing.

"However, the Ampico astonished me, for it reproduces the artist with unbelievable fidelity. It not merely reproduces his phrasing and nuances, but it holds you as if the artist himself were playing, so vividly are the personality and spirit of his playing mirrored.

"It is for this reason that I have decided to record my playing for the Ampico exclusively."

PAN-AMERICAN CONFERENCE OPENS

PRESIDENT SENDS WELCOME

LANSING SEES A GREAT DUTY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Drawn together, as President Wilson said in a message of welcome, by no selfish reason, but solely for the purpose of ascertaining how they might serve one another, the delegates to the Second Pan American Financial Conference, including the Ministers of Finance of several countries, began their work today by reaffirming the solidarity of the Americas in ideals of peace and justice.

Co-operation was pledged for the development of the great natural resources of the two continents, which, it was pointed out, would rebound to the advantages not only of the Pan American nations, but of the world.

Secretary Glass presided at the opening session, at which the delegates heard the message from President Wilson, addresses by Secretary Lansing and John Barrett, Director General of the Pan American Union, and responses by a member of each visiting delegation.

After an informal luncheon the delegates separated into national groups for conferences with prominent business men and bankers of the United States to consider specific problems of transportation, exchange, commercial credits, and other phases of international dealings.

President Praises Their Mission.

The President's message follows:

Gentlemen of the Americas:

I regret more deeply than I can well express the condition of my health deprives me of the pleasure and privilege of meeting with you and personally expressing the gratification which every officer of this Government feels because of your presence at the national capital, and particularly because of the friendly and significant mission which brings you to us.

I rejoice with you that in these troubled times of world reconstruction the republics of the American continent should seek no selfish purpose, but should be guided by a desire to serve one another and to serve the world to the utmost of their capacity. The great privileges that have been showered upon us, both by reason of our geographical position and because of the high political and social ideals that have determined the national development of every country of the American continent, carry with them obligations the fulfillment of which must be regarded as a real privilege by every true American.

It is no small achievement that the Americas are today able to say to the world: "Here is an important section of the globe which has today eliminated the idea of conquest from its national thought and from its international policy."

The spirit of mutual helpfulness which animates the conference supplements and strengthens this important achievement of international policy. I rejoice with you that we are privileged to assemble with the sole purpose of ascertaining how we can serve one another, for in so doing we best serve the world.

(Signed) WOODROW WILSON.

Secretary Glass, after reading President Wilson's message, welcomed the delegates to the conference, which he said was destined to be fruitful of important results in the interchange of information between the officials and financiers of the two continents. He declared it was more and more necessary that those in high places should know one another, since the policies of one nation vitally bear on those of another.

"The world is suffering from a greater uncertainty now than in centuries," he said. "Mankind is showing signs of neurosis which may presage the breakdown of Government unless all sink their differences for the common cause."

Lansing Sees New Opportunity.

Secretary Lansing, welcoming the delegates on behalf of the American Government, declared that the Americas accepted the burdens thrust upon the new world by the war and would press forward with confidence to the better days of the future.

"It is fitting," the Secretary of State continued, "that with the close of that conflict, when an exhausted world is groping amidst the ruins of past prosperity to find foundations on which to rebuild its shattered fortunes, that our republics should again assemble in conference to consider the financial and economic problems of the new era and to devise ways of adjusting our lives and intercourse to the new conditions in harmony with the impelling spirit of Pan Americanism.

"In addition to the recognition of our duty to one another we have a greater mission, a world mission, to fulfill. The Americas stand for certain political and social ideals, which permeated our very existence as nations since we declared and achieved our independence. Of these the most important is the orderly development of political institutions based on the supremacy of the popular will and the equality of economic opportunity unimpaired by special privilege or class distinction. We are free peoples consecrated to liberty and jealous of our rights as nations and as individuals. We can render to humanity no greater service than to preserve these lofty ideals untouched by sordid or selfish purpose as living witnesses of their beneficent power over the affairs of men."

Dr. Domingo E. Salaberry, Minister of Finance of Argentina, said his country gave adhesion to the widest ideals for the common welfare of a Pan America. He declared he expected practical solutions of economic problems put before the conference.

The delegates applauded vigorously his expression of hope for the recovery of President Wilson.

Dr. José Luis Pejada of Bolivia declared that all Latin America joined the United States in the resolution to maintain peace and justice. During the period of reconstruction all the American republics must co-ordinate their efforts to take advantage of all natural resources, he said, adding that the Bolivian delegates were here to discuss how they could make their country's great resources accessible.

Regrets America Is Out of League.

"Without the United States the League of Nations is not complete," declared Dr. Carlos Sampaio of Brazil. "Meanwhile let us realize by friendship and co-operation the League of the Americas."

Dr. Sampaio said Brazil was looking to the United States for assistance in developing that country, not so much by financial aid as by example. He expressed great admiration for America's banking system and great industries.

"The United States is the financial centre of the world," he said, "and is the only nation Latin America can look to now for credits."

Dr. Luis Izquierto of Chile said all the American nations felt the necessity of developing their industries and broadening their trade routes.

"The beneficial intercourse between the American republics, particularly with the United States, which was created by the war, must be maintained and protected," he said.

John Bassett Moore of New York was appointed Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions, the foreign members of which are the Chairmen of each visiting delegation. Secretary of Commerce Alexander was named Chairman of the Committee on Transportation, the foreign members to be appointed by the respective delegations.

Transportation was the subject discussed tonight at the first general session, at which John Barton Payne, Chairman of the Shipping Board, told what the United States Government was doing to establish adequate passenger and freight service for developing South American trade. Dr. Manuel De Cespedes, Minister of Cuba, presided.

Affirming his belief that only by ships, and more ships, could the United States and South America be brought close enough together to "shake hands daily," Chairman Payne outlined the plans of the Shipping Board for linking the interests of the Pan American Republics on a chain of great steamers plying between the two continents.

The extraordinarily small passenger service outlined by Chairman Payne was declared inadequate by some delegates. Dr. Ricardo Aldao of the Argentine delegation said that business men in his country recently were sixty-three days without mail from correspondents in the United States because of the lack of steamship service.

The speaker evoked applause by a tribute to the United States' part in the war.

"Eldest brother," he said, facing the United States flag, "you did well and we are happy and proud of your immortal attitude."

Communication with the United States twenty-five years ago was better than at present, according to Dr. Henrique Peres Du Puy of Venezuela.

POWHATAN SAFE AS SEA GOES DOWN

Danger to Disabled Transport Is Past, but Ships Are Standing By.

According to the latest radio messages received yesterday from Captain Randall, Commander of the disabled army transport Powhatan, there was no need for alarm regarding the safety of the 271 military and civilian passengers and the crew aboard.

The ship is without heat or lights, except the oil lamps and candles, messages stated, and was rolling comfortably in the trough of the sea with the White Star liner Cedric standing by since midnight on Sunday to take off the passengers, and the Bardic of the Atlantic Transport Line, with heavy steel wire hawsers ready to tow the Powhatan to Halifax.

The reports from the captain of the Powhatan stated that the leak had been stopped, the weather was moderating and that the barometer was rising. It is expected that the passengers will be transferred to the Cedric early today and then the Bardic will take the transport in tow to Halifax, about 250 miles from her present position.

This message was received late last night from Captain Carter of the Cedric: "Jan. 19, Noon—Unable to take off passengers owing to weather conditions. Commander of the Powhatan has requested me to stand by until the destroyers arrive. First one expected to be here at midnight. Shall arrive Ambrose P. M., Wednesday."

According to Captain Carter, the position of the Powhatan was 537 miles east of the Ambrose Channel Lightship when he arrived alongside. If he gets the passengers on board in time today the White Star liner should arrive here late tomorrow.

ACT TO AID PUBLISHERS.

House Committee Seeks to Counteract Canadian Newsprint Embargo.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The State Department will be asked to aid American publishers in obtaining supplies of Canadian print apper the House Ways and Means Committee decided today after Representative Young, Republican, North Dakota, had informed the committee that the Canadian Government had reduced normal shipments of paper by 15 per cent. through its export embargo.

The committee also discussed the removal of the price limit on duty free paper, and while no opposition was expressed, some of the members said they doubted whether the price would be affected by the present tariff law.

"Prices realized on Swift & Company sales of carcass beef in New York City for week ending Saturday, Jan. 17th, 1920, on shipments sold out, ranged from 14.00 cents to 26.00 cents per pound, and averaged 18.96 cents per pound."—Advt.

CURTAIL SPACE

Many advertisers are disappointed because there is not space enough in The New York Times to insert their announcements. This is due to the newsprint paper shortage which has necessitated limitation of the number of pages. In consequence, 27 columns of advertisements are omitted today.

Advertisers are requested to curtail the size of their announcements during this emergency in order that all who desire space may be accommodated.

Australia Plans Air Force of 2,000 Planes and 8,600 Men

MELBOURNE, Jan. 19.—Australia needs for war purposes a minimum air force of sixteen squadrons of twenty-five airplanes each and two flying boat squadrons, according to Major General J. G. Legge, Chief of the General Staff.

To maintain such an equipment, equal on a population basis to Great Britain, the Commonwealth should have, in the opinion of Major Gen. Legge, a permanent force of 600 officers and 8,000 men in the air force and more than 2,000 planes of all sorts.

CLEMENCEAU LIKELY TO LEAVE COUNCIL

Presided at Yesterday's Session, but Is Expected to Quit When Millerand Takes Office.

TAKE UP RUSSIAN PROBLEM

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—The Peace Conference finds itself handicapped for a month by the French political changes. It was generally believed that Premier Clemenceau would take farewell of his associates at the Supreme Council's session today, but he presided as usual. Nothing was said about his quitting, and it is presumed by his associates that he will preside at tomorrow's meeting. The French newspapers state this afternoon that he will probably continue to preside until his successor as Premier is in office, which is likely to be Thursday, when Millerand expects to present his new Ministry to Parliament.

There is talk of Clemenceau being retained as France's principal representative at the Peace Conference, but it is believed that he will not choose to do so. It is generally expected that Millerand, as Premier, will succeed him.

If Clemenceau is succeeded by Millerand, the Presidency of the Peace Conference will probably pass at once to Lloyd George.

There is much speculation in Paris today as to what effect on France's peacemaking rôle the change in Government will have. It is felt that there will be little immediate change. Millerand would have been Premier, had Clemenceau, instead of Deschanel, been elected President Saturday, therefore, it is not supposed that Millerand will bring any new rôle for France to the Peace Conference. However, it is generally stated in French political circles that the Millerand Ministry is only a stop-gap and that as soon as Deschanel assumes office, Feb. 18, a new Ministry will be formed, and Briand, who engineered the election of Deschanel, will head the Government.

While the personnel of Millerand's new ministry is not felt to be very strong—only Millerand and Lefevre standing out for past political accomplishment—it is said that Lefevre, who becomes Minister of War, was the man who tried to precipitate a Ministerial crisis some months ago by forcing a demand that before the treaty came into effect new measures be taken to insure the complete disarmament of Germany.

It is not fortunate for pending international settlements that the Millerand Ministry appears at this moment as having small promises of permanency. For the Russian and the Turkish pots are on the fire and the need for quick settlements is more and more apparent.

The Supreme Council at today's meeting was impressive in personnel. It was attended by Lloyd George, Clemenceau and Nitti, as well as by Marshal Foch, Admiral Beatty, General Wilson, and Winston Churchill. It appears that it had been planned to elaborate on the Russian policy outlined in the blockade lifting resolution adopted Friday. It got started on the Russian problem but did not get far. It listened for a long time to representatives of Georgia and other Caucasian states, who wanted military aid against the Bolshevist armies.

This was not in line with the new Russian policy, and after the addresses of the representatives of these States the statesmen discussed the situation for two hours, but it was said that no decision was reached.

Nothing was heard from the Belgrade Government, which was expected to reply today to the latest proposal for the settlement of Adriatic problems. M. Trumbitch, Premier of Jugo-Slavia, says that Belgrade will accept the whole of the plan which makes of Fiume a free city, except that provision which gives Italy a roadway along the sea from the Istria boundary to the city of Fiume. This roadway would be one kilometer wide and fifteen kilometers long. Thus the whole matter hinges on the ownership of about four square miles of territory.

The diplomats at Paris representing all nations await with much interest the further exposition of the new Allied policy. There is a general feeling here that the new policy should be tried in good faith and one hears on all sides the remark that it cannot be any worse than the previous Russian policies of the Allies. Some diplomats on this side of the blockade as Mr. Hoover is and their material interest is evidenced by a burning desire to know just how to go about starting a new trade. The statesmen of France and France's publicists appear skeptical about the new step. That may be because English statesmen are the authors of it, or it may be for other reasons.

La Victoire says today: "Do we think we are going to disarm Trotsky and turn him away from Persia and India by giving him quinine for his chills and hardware for his Moujiks, who hide their wheat and let the inhabitants of cities die of hunger? Certainly it is our humanitarian duty to save millions of humans, who suffer, since we cannot now do anything for millions who have died. But what we would like to know is if the help measure adopted by the Allies will disarm Bolshevism and permit the establishment of a Russian Government which will not be destroyed. Will we be led little by little to new concessions; will we be led to recognise that Communism, which is impossible in our European society, may not be impossible in Russian society.

"And, finally, since it is apparent that neither England nor America will fight against the Soviets in spite of the facilities they have, shall we have to make still other compromises with the Bolsheviki?" The Petit Parisien observes that the least that can be said about the new Russian policy is that it was a great surprise. It goes on:

"It sounds like a laudable proposition to feed starving Russians through the co-operative societies. But above the co-operatives are the Soviets, who have the power. What guarantees have the Allies that what they send into Russia will be fairly distributed? The clientele of the Soviets will be provided for, the enemies of the Soviets will get nothing.

"What are we going to receive from Russia? Not much, it is to be feared. Their railroads are in a state of ruin. Therefore if the Allies are to reap the fruits of their new policy they must send specialists to re-establish communications in the interior of Soviet Russia. That does not seem to agree with the statement of the Supreme Council that there will be no change in the relations between the Allied and Soviet Governments. It appears inevitable that closer relations would come between us and Bolshevist Russia."

Taking up the political side of the situation the editor observes:

"We are astonished to see that the Allies give to the commissaires of the people the favor which they have demanded for a long time, and for which they were ready to pay with large concessions. But the Allies exact nothing. The Supreme Council could have prepared a series of measures to demand of the Soviets and they would have been granted. But they demanded nothing. Lenin ought to smile."

Federal Judge Fines P. R. R. $17,500

Mahsuds Inflict Heavy Losses on British in Severe Fighting on the Indian Border

LONDON, Jan. 19.—News reached London today of a heavy engagement last week on the northwestern frontier of India in which the British suffered severely.

The engagement was fought by the Derajat column which, while advancing last Wednesday into the Mahsud country, met with strong opposition North of Ahnai Danghi and engaged in fighting at close quarters.

The British suffered 385 casualties, including 8 British officers killed, and 12 wounded or missing, while a large number of Indian officers were killed or wounded.

MILLERAND PICKS MOSTLY NEW MEN

TARDIEU WOULD NOT SERVE

PARIS, Jan. 19.—Premier Millerand conferred this afternoon with members of his newly appointed Cabinet and then went to the Elysée Palace alone to visit President Poincaré. It was announced that M. Millerand would present the Ministers to M. Poincaré tomorrow morning and later to President-elect Deschanel. Some Senator, it is understood, will be appointed to head the Ministry of Pensions, this post having not yet been filled.

Premier and Foreign Minister—ALEXANDRE MILLERAND.
Minister of Justice—M. L'HOPITEAU.
War—ANDRE LEFEVRE.
Marine—M. LANDRY.
Commerce—M. ISAAC.
Agriculture—HENRI RICARD.
Finance—FREDERIC FRANCOIS-MARSAL.
Colonies—ALBERT SARRAUT.
Public Works—YVES LE TROCQUER.
Public Instruction—ANDRE HONORAT.
Labor—PAUL JOURDAIN.
Hygiene and Social Welfare—M. BRETON.
Pensions—ANDRE MAGINOT.
Liberated Regions—JEAN OGIER.

M. Jourdain was Minister of Labor in the Clemenceau Cabinet and M. Ie Trocquer was Under Secretary of State for the Liquidation of Stocks. These are the only members of the Clemenceau Ministry retained. M. Francois-Marsal is manager of the Banque Union Parisienne.

Captain André Tardieu has refused to retain the portfolio of Minister of Liberated Regions in the new Cabinet. In reply to M. Millerand's request that he remain in office, Captain Tardieu has said that in the past few days both Chambers of Parliament had shown that they wished to appeal to new men, and, therefore, he was unable to accept the Premier's invitation.

M. Millerand remarked to the newspaper men that he had had a talk with former Premier René Viviani, who had assured him of his fullest support.

Changes in French diplomatic assignments are expected to result from the election of M. Deschanel as President. G. F. Alapetite, present Minister to Spain, may become Governor of Alsace-Lorraine, according to the Echo de Paris, which says that Henri Allize, head of the French Special Mission to Vienna, is being considered for the Madrid post. On the other hand the Excelsior says that it is probable Charles C. A. Jonnart may succeed Millerand, the new Premier, as Governor of Alsace-Lorraine.

M. Deschanel intends to retain the Presidency of the Chamber of Deputies until he takes up the office of President, according to reports from those close to him.

M. Deschanel is noted for two peculiarities. Firstly, he has never consented to accept the portfolio of any Ministry or to form a Ministry with himself as Premier. This abstention, remarkable in French political life, has always been explained as due to his ambition to become President, which he believed might more easily be fulfilled if he never identified himself with any political office.

Secondly, he has never accepted the decoration of the Legion of Honor. Now, when he enters office as President of the republic he becomes automatically Grand Master of that order.

HEAR GEORGIANS' PLEA FOR HELP AGAINST REDS

Supreme Council's Sessions May Be Interrputed if Millerand Cannot Serve.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—The Supreme Council, with M. Clemenceau presiding and Hugh C. Wallace, the American Ambassador, present, heard this morning representatives of the Azerbaijan and Georgian Governments with reference to the integrity of their territory and its eventual defense against attacks by the Bolsheviki.

It is understood the Council considered measures for aid to these States for defense of their frontiers in case of need.

Continuation of the present conference beyond tomorrow depends upon whether the French Government is too absorbed with internal affairs to go on with the important international questions still before the Council. Unless M. Millerand, the new Premier, decides that he wants to go on uninterruptedly with the deliberations, Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain will go home Wednesday.

MACONA SINKS WITH 49 IN NORTH SEA WRECK

One of the Crew of American Freighter, Bound for New York, Saved.

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 19.—Forty-nine members of the crew of the American steamer Macona, which struck a rock off Nidingen Light and foundered, were lost, the only survivor being the second mate.

The steamer Macona, reported today from Stockholm as having foundered off Nidingen Light, with the loss of all but one of her crew, was formerly the coastwise steamer City of Macon. She was owned by the Macona Steamship Corporation of New York and was operated by the Barber Lines.

At the office of the operators it was said today the vessel left Copenhagen Jan. 16 in ballast for New York. No word, other than that contained in the press dispatches, has been received of the accident. The ship was built in 1903 and registered 5,313 tons gross. She was commanded by Captain Williamsen.

VIENNA A DEAD CITY UNTIL IT GETS COAL

NO FOOD RELIEF IN SIGHT

VIENNA, Jan. 18.—A shudder went through Vienna today when it was announced that the authorities were resolving to suspend the tramway services, owing to the lack of coal. Not only have all the street cars stopped, but theatres, concert halls and other places of amusement have been placed under the ban. Even stores and salesrooms may not use electric and gas lighting after 3 in the afternoon, and worse than all, electric and gas power has been cut off from factories, and this results in an increase of unemployment.

Every source from which Vienna has been receiving coal supplies has been shut off owing to strikes or transport difficulties. Much had been hoped from the visit of Dr. Renner, the Austrian Chancellor, recently made to Prague, the capital of Czechoslovakia, whither he was accompanied by an imposing array of Ministerial colleagues. He was to negotiate on many subjects, but his success in obtaining a satisfactory coal treaty was to be the criterion by which his mission would be judged.

He came back without obtaining his treaty for the Czechs, pointed out their inability to cover their own demands. It is true negotiations on this point are to be continued, but in the meantime Vienna and Austria must continue without coal.

Dr. Renner has made two begging journeys lately, one to Paris and the other to Prague and neither produced any tangible result in this desired direction, but both journeys have produced a mental effect, which produced a feeling of complete isolation and of the necessity for dependence on home resources, which it is known are not wholly insufficient for the means of subsistence.

From now on Vienna becomes a temporarily dead city owing to the lack of coal. Her currency has reached the lowest point yet recorded, the kroner being quoted today at 850 for pound sterling (the pre-war exchange was 24 or 25 to the pound). During the past few weeks the price of bread doubled.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—Representatives of the American Mission for the Relief of Children have just finished an examination of school children in Vienna, and found, according to a dispatch received by the Austrian delegation here, that 97 per cent. of them are suffering from lack of food.

There is nothing in sight in the way of relief beyond the 15,000 tons of foodstuffs already delivered in Vienna, members of the Austrian delegation say, and, so far as they are aware, no negotiations are in progress looking to a practical solution of the problem. Both British and French officials say they want to help Austria, and it is the supposition in Austrian circles that everything is waiting upon action in America.

CAPETOWN, Jan. 18.—Jan Christian Smuts, member of the British delegation at the Peace Conference, has issued a fervent appeal to the people of South Africa to associate themselves in the work of relieving distress in Central Europe, and to devote special effort to work for starving children.

BLAMES GEN. HARTS FOR PRISON CONDITIONS

Major Gen. Harbord Names Paris Sector Commandant to the House Committee.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Responsibility for prison conditions in the American army in the Paris sector was placed today on Brigadier-General William Harts, former commandant of the district, by Major General Harbord, commander of the Service of Supplies in the A. E. F.

Asked by Representative Bland, Republican, Indiana, of the sub-committee before which he appeared, what procedure was necessary to bring General Harts before a court-martial, General Harbord replied that Secretary Baker could issue an order. General Harts is now Chief of Staff of the Army of Occupation.

"It is evident why General Harts has never been court-martialed," Bland said. "He was the teacher's pet in this country, and the teacher's pet in France, and it has always taken courage to attack him.

"Fifty men were placed in a contemptible room and left there indefinitely because it was claimed better quarters could not be obtained. Officers, however, found no difficulty in finding luxurious quarters and the headquarters of the district of Paris was located in a palace."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—John B. Dunlop, inventor of automobile tires, who is 70 years old, has a strong objection to being represented in advertisements in foppish attire and wearing a monocle.

Today he brought his grievance before the Chancery Court in Dublin and as a result obtained permission to serve a writ on the Dunlop Rubber Company with the object of restraining the company from publishing in Ireland advertisements representing him in absurd or unsuitable costumes or attitudes.

In an affidavit Dunlop referred to one familiar advertisement of the company showing a tall man dressed in an exaggeratedly foppish manner wearing a tall silk hat and white waistcoat and carrying a cane and eyeglass, none of which it was his custom to wear or carry. Dunlop added that the picture had given great annoyance to him and his relatives.

Spanish Railway Strike Called Off.

MADRID, Jan. 19.—The railway men's unions in Madrir and the provinces have withdrawn notices of a strike to begin tomorrow, in view of the Government showing an inclination to renew negotiations for the reinstatement of the railway strikers of August, 1917.

ALL LIQUOR SIGNS MUST COME DOWN

DENIES TALES OF BIG RAIDS

Andersen Tells Clergymen League Will Stay in Politics as Long as There Is Need.

James Shevlin, Federal Prohibition Commissioner for New York City, Rhode Island, and Connecticut, announced yesterday that all signs advertising intoxicating beverages must be pulled down, hidden from public view, or painted out. Although the edict calling for the removal of signs advertising liquors is part of the Prohibition law, and was supposed to have become effective last Saturday, Commissioner Shevlin said the liquor men would be given a period of grace.

"Among the details which must be accomplished in the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment is the eradication of signs advertising the sale of liquor," he declared. "We will not be too harsh in the enforcement of the law, realizing that the entire enforcement cannot be accomplished in a single day. The law is in effect now, but sufficient time will be given the liquor men to take down their signs.

"If we find that saloons are displaying liquor signs and the proprietors are making no effort to tear them down the saloon men will be placed under arrest."

Commissioner Shevlin denied reports that he had seized millions of dollars' worth of liquor. The amount of liquor seized since the Eighteenth Amendment became operative was consequential, he said. It was said at the office of the Green River Distilling Company, yesterday that the reports of the Government's seizure of their stock of whisky on Pier 22 were untrue. An official said the whisky came from Kentucky in bond and missed a vessel which it was learned at the last minute was overloaded. Permission was obtained to put the 2,000 cases, valued at $300,000, in a United States bonded warehouse, whence it will be sold for nonbeverage purposes.

Three barrels of Green River whisky were turned loose from Davy Jones's locker last night in the North River. Two of the barrels floated under the Columbia Yacht Club at Eighty-sixth Street and the other one rolled ashore between Eighty-fifth and Eighty-sixth Streets. Patrolmen from Harbor A, assigned to watch for the liquor when it came to the surface, rescued it to the West 100th Street Police Station. It will be taken to Police Headquarters today and turned over to the property clerk. The three barrels were part of a consignment for Havana, Cuba, aboard a barge in the North River, when the barge was sunk, carrying with it 800 barrels in all.

Need for Popular Support.

John F. Kramer, Federal Prohibition Commissioner, in an address under the Commissioner, in an address before one thousand clergymen who met at the Metropolitan Lite Building under the auspices of the Anti-Saloon League, likened the Decalogue to the prohibition amendment.

"The passions, the appetites, and the desires of men," he said, "made it necessary for the promulgation of the Ten Commandments now embodied in Holy Writ. Notwithstanding the fact that the commandments and our criminal laws interfere with men's passions, appetites, and desires, yet they still stand and are obeyed by the great mass of the American people. So I am sure it will be under the Federal prohibition amendment and the law enacted thereunder.

"Why should this law be considered differently than any other law? Some say it interferes with the personal liberty of men and hence should not be enforced or obeyed. If it were not for men's appetites we would need no law with a penalty attached to it."

Anderson to Thank Hayes.

William H. Anderson, State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, read a letter from Archbishop Patrick J. Hayes declining to take part in the meeting. "There has been an unwarranted attempt in certain quarters," he said, "to get a controversy out of our invitation to the Archbishop of New York and his reply. Instead of feeling controversial we feel indebted to Archbishop Hayes for his unequivocal statement in this connection of the Catholic attitude of respect for law, and shall promptly write him thanking him for his letter and furnishing the information called for by the legitimate question suggested by him."

Mr. Anderson said the prohibition fight was only starting. The only hope of the liquor interests, he said, lay in the possibility of repealing or changing the enforcement act.

"Because the 'wets' have decided to remain in politics in order to nullify prohibition he said, "the Anti-Saloon League will stay in politics as long as the exigency needs a representative for that purpose. The bill to make a separate State, composed mainly of New York City, is based upon the belief of the 'wets' that if they could get rid of the up-State sentiment the churches of New York City would not interfere with them much."

Charles R. O'Connor, State Prohibition Commissioner, said that the sum of $2,000,000 to enforce prohibition was inadequate, and urged clergymen to call on Congress for an adequate appropriation.

The clergymen passed a resolution voicing their opposition to any effort to repeal or weaken the prohibition amendment.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Jan. 19.—Owing to only partial resumption of work by the telegraph employes, the Government only allows the transmission of very short press messages.

The Eternal City is hardly recognizable during these days of the strike. A heavy impenetrable mist hangs like a pall over the town, making Italians for once realise what a London fog may be like. Reckless automobile drivers have had to lessen their speed, while citizens have kept a sharp lookout for street cars and cabs, whose lights, hardly discernible through the yellowish mist, are almost upon them before they realise it.

This state of affairs is allowing the strike scavengers to reduce the city to a perfect dust heap. The sidewalks of the chief thoroughfares are lined with big garbage mounds, while the smaller streets take one back to mediaeval times, when all refuse was thrown out of the windows.

The people of the capital are now experiencing the sensation of living a century ago without proper mail distributions, telegraph or telephone, and they do not like the sensation. Boy Scouts have volunteered to take the places of the postmen, while citizens of all classes and professions have offered their services to the authorities, thus enabling wire and letter services to be partially carried on for the vital needs of the country. Motor lorries conduct some citizens to their different tasks and their appearance is always a sign for an enthusiastic demonstration on the part of passersby, who all denounce the strikers.

However, the street cleaners have decided to return to work, while other strikers appear to be coming around to a more reasonable frame of mind.

Austria and Czechoslovakia Said to Have Formed Alliance

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—Dr. Karl Renner, Austrian Chancellor, has informed the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Assembly that an offensive and defensive alliance has been concluded at Prague between Austria and Czechoslovakia, according to the Frankfurter Zeitung's Vienna correspondent.

RHODE ISLAND WILL TEST PROHIBITION

TWO CAUSES ALLEGED

Violation of Fifth Amendment and Interference with the States' Police Powers.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The Supreme Court today decided to pass on the validity of both the Federal Prohibition Amendment, which became operative Saturday, and the act of Congress prescribing the manner of its enforcement.

The court's decision will be rendered on proceedings to be begun by the State of Rhode Island, which received permission today to bring an original suit.

In briefs filed in support of the motion the Rhode Island authorities alleged that the amendment was an interference with the State police powers and a violation of the Fifth Constitutional Amendment. They also alleged that the amendment was "usurpatory, unconstitutional and void."

The State of Ohio today asked the Supreme Court to expedite consideration of appeals brought by George S. Hawke, an attorney of Cincinnati, to determine the validity of the Ohio constitutional referendum amendment.

The question was involved in two proceedings instituted to enjoin State officials from submitting the Federal Prohibition and Suffrage Amendments to a referendum vote in Novemebr, on the ground that the referendum amendment was invalid. The trial court held that that State amendment was constitutional, and it was upheld by the State Supreme Court.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 19.—The Rhode Island plan to test the constitutionality of the Federal Prohibition Amendment had its inception when the General Assembly last year authorised and directed the Attorney General to contest the validity of the amendment and appropriated $5,000 for preliminary expenses. The Legislature had already voted against ratification of the amendment.

2 KENTUCKY DISTILLERS CHARGED WITH FRAUD

President of Wathen Plant at Louisville and General Manager Deny Tax Evasion.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 19.—R. E. Wathen, president, and William Knebelkamp, general manager of R. E. Wathen and Company, Louisville distillers, surrendered to Federal authorities late today, on warrants charging them with attempting to defraud the Government out of taxes on distilled spirits. Both men pleaded not guilty and were released on $2,000 bond for preliminary trial next week.

The affidavits on which the warrants were based charge that Wathen as principal and Knebelkamp as accessory illegally removed 8,000 cases of bottled-in-bond whisky, tax paid at the rate of $2.20 per gallon for medicinal use, but sold it for beverage purposes, which requires an additional tax of $4.20 per gallon.

The alleged illegal removal of the whisky and evasion of tax, the Government asserts, took place during the first fifteen days of this month. The affidavits recite that it was taken from an export bonded warehouse and removed to a free warehouse, where it surreptitiously was offered for sale at $130 a case, according to the Government's allegation.

The Wathen distillery, which was seized today, together with 35,000 barrels of whisky, is the oldest in the State. The first Wathen still was set up in 1788, since which time its brands have been famous.

PREDICT CLASHES OVER SHOPS COUNCILS LAW

BERLIN, Jan. 18 (Associated Press.)—The passage of the Shops Councils bill, otherwise known as the "exploitation law," one of the most radical pieces of economic legislation since the war, by the National Assembly today after five days' acrimonious debate, does not satisfy the Independents, who clamored for a measure after the Russian pattern.

The bill was especially opposed by both rightist parties because of its radical interference with the Agrarian and big industrial working systems. Skepticism is frequently professed among all ranks with regard to the workability of the measure, and clashes between capital and labor, it is feared, will be inevitable.

Owing to its wide ramifications it will be a year or two before its feasibility is established. It is estimated that the membership of the stewards in the Shops Councils will exceed 500,000.

The measure affects all places where more than five men or women are employed, excepting newspapers, in which business the councils are not permitted to dictate. The five or more employes elect a steward, who will confer with the employer on the relations with the workers and the general conduct of the business. The number of stewards varies proportionately to the size of the staff, whose representatives will now have the privilege of attending Directors' meetings where they will be active voters, although not shareholders.

A foreman or department chief may be forced to quit, regardless of his services to his employer. This feature was stubbornly fought by the big business interests. One of the last modifications prohibits an employer from discharging a woman and substituting a male employe for reason of sex alone.

Democratic Mayor in Middletown.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Jan. 19.—James F. Connery, Democrat, was elected Mayor of this city today, defeating George A. Tierney by a majority of 238 votes. Connery will succeed Mayor Arthur V. McDavell, Republican, who defeated him by fifteen votes in the Mayoralty race two years ago.

WEEKS TO GIVE OUT MINUTES OF JURY

Will Let Public Decide as to "Interboro Conspiracy" and "Overshadowing Crime."

CRITICISES THE PROSECUTOR

Court's Memorandum Reveals That Short Sales of Stocks by Officials Were Suspected.

NO CRIME, SAYS TALLEY

Assistant District Attorney Defends Officials Against Insinuations.

Supreme Court Justice Bartow S. Weeks yesterday ordered the publication of the minutes of the Extraordinary Grand Jury relating to the suggestion of Mayor Hylan that the Interborough strike of last August was due to a conspiracy to force higher transit fares on the city and to the "overshadowing crime" involving public officials, which the Grand Jury hinted it had discovered.

The minutes, which fill four books, having a total of 1,100 pages, will become available for publication today. In ordering their publication Justice Weeks criticised the District Attorney, charging an attempt to mislead the public as to the nature of the inquiry.

Assistant District Attorney Alfred J. Talley issued a statement yesterday afternoon asserting that the minutes of the Grand Jury contained "not one scintilla of evidence to justify the charge of an 'overshadowing crime.'" Foreman Raymond J. Almirall of the Grand Jury, in his original statement on the "overshadowing crime" asserted, according to Mr. Talley, that that crime was committed in connection with traction matters and could only be disclosed by an investigation of the "origin and causative processes" which produced the charge that there had been a traction conspiracy.

In a memorandum handed down with the order, Justice Weeks said:

"Prior to Nov. 1, 1919, the Foreman of the Grand Jury called to the attention of the court the fact that he had received certain communications relating to short selling of traction stock and on or about Nov. 2, 1919, a similar communication, which was anonymous, was received by the court and shown by the court to District Attorney Swann, the court then pointing out that information on the subject might be of value. The District Attorney thereupon brought the matter to the attention of the Grand Jury on Nov. 3 (see minutes page 244 and following), and his assistant, Mr. McQuaid, was assigned to the conduct of the investigation in the course of which the court never had any reason to believe that the District Attorney was not kept fully advised of the purpose of the investigation being made by his own assistant.

"It is manifest, therefore, that the claim now made by the District Attorney that he investigation was not conducted by his own office is without foundation and cannot be permitted to confound the real issue. The application is therefore granted.

"The minutes filed herewith and which are hereby made public are all of the minutes furnished to the court by the District Attorney as the minutes of the investigation of the charges of conspiracy affecting officials of the I. R. T., which charges were dismissed by the Grand Jury on Jan. 14, 1920.

"It is not my intention to make public at this time certain letters discovered by the Grand Jury in the course of their investigation and referred to on Page 360 of the minutes, which, however, have no bearing upon the charges of conspiracy between the officials of the I. R. T. and others, for the reason that the subject matter of such letters is the basis of a separate investigation now being conducted and because, in my opinion it would be contrary to the public interest and in violation of the rights of the individuals therein mentioned to make them public, at least until the investigation based thereon is completed.

"In granting this application the Court feels that it is its duty to record its official disapproval of the conduct and language of the Assistant District Attorney upon the argument. The only reason he was permitted to conclude such an argument and to file the affidavits in the form in which they were presented, containing matters so manifestly irrelative as to indicate an ulter

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Move Irregularly—Banking Position Improved and Money Rates Easier.

The improvement in the local banking situation, as reflected in the week-end displays issued at the Reserve Bank and the Clearing House, inspired a somewhat stronger tone in yesterday's stock market at the opening and for a short time thereafter, when prices advanced and offerings were not as heavy as usually they are on a Monday morning. There seemed to be no great accumulation of selling orders in the hands of brokers and this, with the greater confidence engendered by the bank exhibits, explained the early firmness.

But an 8 per cent. renewal rate for demand loans—in itself not a terrifying development—apparently gave the signal to the professional traders who have been active recently on the short side to resume their operations for the decline and by midday the market was heavy, with pronounced weakness in some of the highly speculative industrial specialties. This weakness continued until the turn into the last hour of the day, when recovery started all through the list. The call money rate at this time was down to 6 per cent. and there seemed to be an abundance of accommodation for all market requirements. The close of the market was reasonably steady and net changes on the day were not, as a rule, great.

The financial community, so far as one could judge from external evidences, is still more or less anxious over this week's meetings of banking powers. The Federal Reserve Board holds its weekly session in Washington today and there is the big conference scheduled for Chicago on Friday. Incidentally, it is possible that something may develop at the weekly meeting of the Directors of the local Reserve Bank, on Wednesday, but this is not considered especially probable. At today's meeting of the Reserve Board some hint of the Board's attitude regarding loans on commodities may be forthcoming, and Wall Street is keenly interested.

However, most interest naturally attaches to Friday's conference. It is expected that that affair will result in clearing house associations all over the country taking action similar to that taken by the New York association last week, when a maximum rate was fixed for interest on bank balances. With this in mind, there was a belief in some circles yesterday that no alteration in Reserve Bank rates would be undertaken during the present week, but there can be no assurance of this, and the stock market reflected the uncertainty of the situation.

The foreign exchange market, with one or two exceptions, continued to drag yesterday. This, it was felt, was due primarily to the enforced liquidation of foreign credits which have been piling up rapidly in the portfolios of local banks for some time past. Collaterally, the decline also responds to the expansion in raw stuffs exports, such as cotton and grain.

In marked contrast to the other exchanges, however, Russians were in aggressive demand, and both ruble currency and the several issues of Russian bonds advanced sensationally. The announced lifting of the embargo on Soviet Russia is expected to have a far-reaching effect on both the currency notes and the bonds, for it is understood that Russia has considerable quantities of raw materials which may be exported at no far distant date. If this is the case, it is easily possible that Russian exchange will come back to something approximating normal much faster than any of the ultra-depreciated exchanges. The depreciation in Russian rubles has been due to causes quite different than those which influenced German marks or Austrian kronen, for instance, and, potentially, the Russians seem to be in stronger position, once the political barrier is lifted, than many of the others.

SAVE SAGE TENANTS' HOMES FROM SALE

OCCUPANTS TO BUY AT COST

Property Will Be Excluded from Auction of Estate's Realty Today.

When the list of properties to be sold for the estate of Mrs. Russell Sage was made public several days ago, citizens of Cedarhurst, L. I., discovered that the parcels to be disposed of included the sixty-seven houses and plots in one of Mrs. Sage's favorite philanthropic enterprises in that village.

Knowing that it had been the intention of Mrs. Sage to permit the occupants of the houses to purchase them ultimately, and fearing that this plan might be jeopardised if they were sold at auction, a committee of citizens was organized to raise the money to buy the houses for the occupants who had been approved by Mrs. Sage. The cottages will be turned over to those occupants at cost and all of them will be removed from the auction sale to be held by Joseph P. Day at the Real Estate Exchange today.

The suggestion that the philanthropic scheme of Mrs. Sage should be saved for the benefit of the original tenants of the houses and for preventing the possible entry of an undesirable class of citizens originated with William S. Pettit, a lawyer of Far Rockaway, and other citizens of Lawrence and Cedarhurst. It gained support in all those villages.

For carrying out the intentions of these citizens a committee of twelve men was selected from the membership of the Cedarhurst Community Club. The personnel of this committee includes men who took an active interest in patriotic movements during the war. Joseph S. Auerbach, the lawyer, was chosen Chairman, and the other members are Peter Olney, Jr., C. C. Adams, President of the village of Lawrence; John McNicol, President of the village of Cedarhurst; J. H. Burton, manufacturer; Howard S. Kniffen, broker; Abraham Adelberg, manufacturer; Albro Newton, lawyer, and George Hurd, lawyer.

This committee formed the Cedarhurst Community Homes Company to withdraw the Sage property from the sale and, within a few days after the original proposal was made, had raised the money needed for carrying out the plan. Members said yesterday that this sum was "something less than $200,000."

The houses are seven and eight room cottages, valued at about $3,000 each, with plots of ground for gardens. The original tenants will have the option of buying these cottages at the figure paid to the Sage estate by the Community Homes Company. They will pay down 20 per cent. of the purchase price and the remainder will be on mortgage. None but the original occupants will be permitted to buy because all of them are anxious to remain where they are.

Members of the committee said that the community was one of the favorite philanthropic schemes of Mrs. Sage, and that she made frequent visits of inspection to the group of houses. She was acquainted personally with every one of the families, including about 300 persons, in the community, and had taken a part in their selection for tenancy there.

According to the members of the committee, it was the original intention of Mrs. Sage to enable the tenants to purchase their homes, but she neglected to make the necessary provisions before her death. Recognizing this interest of Mrs. Sage the executors of the estate made every effort to assist the Cedarhurst committee.

It is the belief of the committee members that the tenants are most desirable citizens. They are craftsmen who work on the Long Island estates and in the villages there.

CANADA SENDS $10,000,000.

Gold Received Here Is Balance of December Shipment.

Gold amounting to $10,000,000, it was learned yesterday, has been received from Canada within the last few days.

This gold, it is understood, completes the transfer of $20,000,000 which the Canadian Minister of Commerce announced was being forwarded to this market last December. At that time, when Canadian exchange went to the record discount of 11 per cent., advices from Ottawa stated that $20,000,000 in gold would be sent here, but only $10,000,000 arrived.

Tropical Oil Reported Bought.

There were reports yesterday that the International Petroleum Company, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, had purchased the Colombian properties of the Tropical Oil Company, comprising about 2,000,000 acres of oil lands, for $40,000,000. The rumors lack confirmation, however. It is understood that the purchase of Tropical Oil is being considered, but it is hardly believed that the price is as high as that mentioned. International Petroleum is a Canadian company, and if there is a deal for the purchase of Tropical, any details will undoubtedly be announced in Canada.

BELGIAN LOAN NOW DOUBLY SUBSCRIBED

It was stated unofficially yesterday that the $25,000,000 Belgian one-five year loan had been doubly subscribed, with the applications favoring the five-year notes as against the one-year notes, in the ratio of approximately three to one. This operation, it was further stated, had proved the most successful foreign offering put out in the American market since the opening up of this kind of business early last Fall, when the $250,000,000 United Kingdom loan was floated, and some bankers declared that the deadlock in the bond market had been broken and were willing to predict that the near future would see a considerable increase in foreign offerings.

The most encouraging feature of the Belgian flotation, it was pointed out, was the great number of applications from small investors. This, bankers thought, augured well for the exchange feature, and indicated that the American bond buyer of small means has at last come to appreciate the possibilities of profit in the depreciated European exchanges. If this is actually the case, it is expected that other similar loans will be arranged and that by offering inducements in exchange, the cost of the money to foreign governments will be reduced to a basis which will make it attractive for them.

In this respect, it is said that the American demand for allied internal bonds and notes is steadily mounting. One house which recently undertook a campaign of popularising European internal issues was amazed at the volume of inquiries received. It is said that the total of bonds sold by this one concern went above $20,000,000 in a few months.

Other large bond distributing houses have received many applications for foreign bonds, and in some places these applications have been so large as to be embarrassing. The delivery of foreign bonds is necessarily slow and is not always certain, and a few houses say they have had some difficulty in making delivery at all. Also, there is the danger of considerable change in the market price between the time of accepting orders and making final delivery, and clients who have seen material depreciation before they actually get their securities have been inclined to protest.

This objection, bankers contend, is entirely eliminated when the security in question is a dollar bond, containing some exchange privilege, and immediately obtainable, and for this reason it is expected that a great part of the demand for European internal bonds will be turned into the dollar bonds which offer some exchange inducements.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

A Quiet Market.

Compared with some sessions of last week, yesterday's was a quiet market, without even the customary number of pronounced changes from the previous closing. Net fluctuations were, for the most part, narrow, with a firm undertone prevailing. In so far as the shorts were concerned, there seemed to be no hurry to cover, but it was noticeable that the new drives here and there did not uncover further liquidation of long stock. These were engineered by the professionals, who for the moment had the market in control. General Motors and Crucible, for instance, were under pressure, and, while they gave ground while the drives were on, they rebounded easily.

Seeking Weak Points.

The professionals were, for the most part, engaged in an endeavor to uncover further weak spots in the general list. To this end they sold many of the newcomers on the Big Board freely. National Aniline and Coca-Cola were under fire, the former selling off rapidly around noon, but recovering so that the net change was only a fractional loss. Coca-Cola, which might have been expected to profit with the advent of prohibition, also gave way under the pressure exerted against it, but there was an upturn in the latter part of the afternoon that carried the issue close to its price at Saturday's close, the net change amounting to only a little more than a point.

The Opening in the Rails.

The lack of interest in the rails for many months showed itself in marked degree at the opening yesterday. In the office of one of the large commission houses the board shows across the top thirty-two or the leading rails. Twenty-five minutes after the opening yesterday only eight of the thirty-two had recorded opening prices, and the section showed a high percentage of vacant places even at the end of the first hour.

Royal Dutch Gains.

One of the strongest of the oil issues was Royal Dutch, which gained 2¾ points, with the close at 106⅝. At this figure the shares were up very close to their high point of last week. According to rumor, there has been considerable accumulation of Royal Dutch at the low prices.

United States Steel Unchanged.

An indication of the market tone is perhaps best given by the action of United States Steel. The range for the day was only 1⅛ points, and the close, at 105¾, was the same as Saturday's close. While it is generally conceded that the steel companies are facing big business, the steel stocks have been quite unresponsive to the outlook. Steel common, for instance, is not far from the price that ruled a year ago. Some of the other steel shares have not been quite as sluggish, but at least they have not improved to the extent that has ruled in other industrials.

A Small Turnover.

The total turnover in yesterday's trading on the Stock Exchange was only 776,195 shares, and the number of issues in which there were transactions amounted to 269, the smallest recorded in some time for a full trading day.

The Equipment Companies.

There is doubt as to whether the railroads will order much in the way of locomotives during the present year, but in so far as cars are concerned, it appears that the orders may exceed earlier expectations. A number of roads are making substantial inquiries for cars. The Union Pacific, for instance, is seeking 3,000, and several other roads want a like number. If the inquiries develop into orders it might be presumed that the car manufacturers at least, would have a good year.

An Austrian Railroad Deal Reported.

Considerable curiosity has been aroused in the financial district recently by reports from the other side that negotiations have been started by a Franco-American group of interests to acquire the Austrian State Railway and the commercial vessels which ply up and down the Danube. The rumors have been vague and a canvas of likely sources failed to uncover any verification. According to the report the price mentioned is 40,000,000,000 francs.

Another Rail Note Extension.

It has been proposed by the Carolina, Clinchfield and Ohio Railway to extend its $6,000,000 5½ per cent. Elkhorn first mortgage gold notes, due January 1, 1920, for two years at 6 per cent. with a bonus of $20 to the holder of each $1,000 note who agrees to the extension. That similar action will probably be taken by other companies which have short time paper falling due early this year is generally believed, as a considerable amount of this kind of refinancing was effected at the beginning of 1919.

Another Provisory Dividend.

The Directors of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha Railroad have declared the usual semi-annual dividends of $2.50 on the common stock, and $3.50 on the preferred stock, payable February 20 to stockholders of record February 2, provided necessary funds are received in time from the Railroad Administration.

British Railway Exports Supply.

Figures compiled by the British Board of Trade indicate that in the first ten months of last year there was a substantial increase in the value of railway materials exported. The following figures are for the most important items:

	10 Months 1919.	10 Months 1918.
Locomotives	$1,120,625	$1,004,521
Rails	1,570,913	436,507
Freight cars	1,483,917	270,859

The Board of Trade figures also show that in the ten months of 1919 Great Britain exported 97,752 tons of rails, compared with 23,828 tons in the corresponding 1918 months.

Low-Priced Rails Favored.

The low-priced rails were favorites early yesterday, and most of them closed with fractional gains. The professionals have pointed repeatedly to rumors that the fixation of return on aggregate property value in the pending railroad legislation will be a strong bull argument in favor of the low-priced rails. The buying movement got under way with Pere Marquette leading, and many of the shares moved forward on comparatively small turnovers. Missouri, Kansas & Texas was a feature, closing with a net gain of 1 point. Among other issues which advanced were Missouri Pacific, the Frisco system shares and Texas & Pacific.

***

Columbia Gas Rumors.

In spite of the circulation of rumors that the dividend action of Columbia Gas and Electric Company Directors today would be favorable, the stock closed with a fractional net loss. The present dividend is $4.

Some Issues Sensitive.

Several issues in the general list proved particularly sensitive yesterday to either buying or selling. Several rails gained easily on small turnovers, and industrials and public utilities, on exchanges of only a few hundred shares, gained or lost ground easily. Among them were American Writing Paper preferred, Ann Arbor, Barrett Company, Brooklyn Edison, Chicago & Eastern Illinois, Denver & Rio Grande and Home Mining.

LONG ISLANDERS FIGHT CLUB HUNTERS

MAY GO TO LEGISLATURE

Water Fowl Alleged to be Baited to Private Ponds and Slaughtered Wholesale.

Special to The New York Times.

RIVERHEAD, L. I., Jan. 19.—Charges that the game laws are interpreted for the benefit of clubs of wealthy sportsmen rather than for residents of Long Island and those who are unable to join exclusive organizations have been made by the newly formed Long Island Fish and Game Protective Association. The association, which is made up of native hunters, fishermen, and the smaller gun clubs, singles out the Flanders Club of Flanders and the South Side Sportsmen's Club of Oakdale as organizations which it asserts are enjoying special privileges.

The association declares that the Flanders Club, of which William B. Boulton, President of the Morristown Trust Company and a member of the State Conservation Commission of New Jersey, is head, has been luring wild ducks and other fowl by placing corn in ponds on its preserves. By this means, it is asserted, the ducks are attracted from their natural feeding grounds within a radius of fifteen miles and are slaughtered by thousands. The association denounces this practice as unsportsmanlike, and to correct this evil plans to have a bill introduced into the present Legislature forbidding the baiting of wild fowl. Similar charges have been made against the South Side Sporting Club.

The resentment of the native gunners against the clubs came to a climax last month when the State Conservation Commission ruled that battery shooting was prohibited in Peconic Bay, all of which restricted area is within a few miles of the Flanders Club preserves. Nevertheless, according to the members of the new association, men belonging to the Flanders Club are permitted to shoot the birds which feed in their ponds and meadows, while native gunners are not allowed to entice the birds by decoys in that vicinity.

Opposition to the measure is expected from the big clubs. It was said that the Flanders Club would contest the charge made by the Association that it had appropriated to its own use ponds owned by the town of Southampton. The club claims control of the ponds by virtue of leases or ownership of the lands surrounding the water.

Almon G. Rasuin, a New York lawyer, is President of the new association. Assistant United States District Attorney George Polhemus of Jamaica and Clair C. Duval of this village are Vice president and Secretary, respectively. William K. Vanderbilt, Sr., has long been identified with the South Side Sportsmen's Club, which numbers among its members many prominent New Yorkers. The Flanders Club ranks with it in exclusiveness.

PLANS TO EXPORT RAZORS.

American Safety Forms New Corporation for Foreign Trade.

The American Safety Razor Export Corporation has been incorporated in Delaware with a capital of 400,000 shares of no par value. According to George L. Storm, President of the American Safety Razor Corporation, the parent company has turned over to the new company all of its foreign assets in addition to enough cash to give it an asset value of about $2 a share.

The export company will have the sole license for the use of American Safety Razor trademarks and patents throughout the world. Present shareholders of the American Safety Razor Corporation will have the right to subscribe to 200,000 shares of the new company on the basis of one share of export stock for every four shares of the parent stock held. The remaining 200,000 shares will be retained in the treasury of the parent company, thereby assuring control of the export subsidiary.

BUSINESS EXPENSES EXEMPT FROM TAX

NO TARIFF ON BAD DEBTS

Losses Incurred in Other Than Regular Business or Trade May Be Taken Out.

Deductions from gross income are discussed in the fifth of the United States Bureau of Internal Revenue's series on "Income Facts You Should Know," which was made public yesterday. The text follows:

Deductions from gross income in determining net income include all business expenses, which are the amounts actually incurred during the tax year in the conduct of a business, trade, or profession.

A merchant may claim as deductions the amount paid for advertising, hire of clerks and other employes, the cost of light, fuel, heat, water and telephone used in his place of business, the cost of operating delivery wagons, motor trucks and incidental repairs to such vehicles.

A physician may claim as deductions the cost of medicines and medicinal supplies used by him in his practice, a reasonable proportion of the expenses paid in the maintenance and repair of an automobile used in making professional calls, the expenses of attending medical conventions, dues to medical societies, and subscriptions to medical journals, the rent paid for office rooms and the cost of heat, water, light, telephone, &c., used in such office rooms, and salaries paid to office assistants. The same deductions are allowed a dentist.

Many Deductions for Farmers.

The farmer may deduct all amounts paid in preparing his land for a crop, and the cultivation, harvesting and marketing of the crop. The cost of seed and fertilizer used and amounts spent in caring for live stock are deductible items. The cost of minor repairs to farm buildings, other than the dwelling, and the fences, farm machinery and wagons may be claimed, also the cost of farm tools which are used up in the course of a year or two. The cost of machinery of a permanent character, such as a thrashing machine or tractor, is held to be a capital investment and is not an allowable deduction. Rent paid for a farm is deductible.

The principles underlying these allowances are equally applicable to the conduct of any trade, business, or profession. In short, all expenses connected solely and directly with the conduct of an income-producing business, trade, profession, or vocation are allowable.

Losses Outside Regular Business.

Losses incurred by a taxpayer in any transaction entered into for profit outside of his regular business are allowed. Under the 1917 act deductions for such losses were allowed only to the extent of gains in similar transactions.

If, for example, a person made $1,000 in one stock market transaction and in another lost $5,000 he was required to include the $1,000 in his return of gross income, and could deduct only that amount as a loss. Under the current act he is allowed a deduction of $4,000.

"A reasonable allowance is made for depreciation of business property and obsolescence, and for the depletion of oil and gas wells and other natural deposits.

Contributions or gifts made during the year 1919 to corporations organized for charitable, scientific, religious, or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to animals or to the special fund for vocational rehabilitation may be deducted to an amount not exceeding 15 per cent. of the taxpayer's income.

Other items which may be deducted are as follows:

Taxes paid or accrued during the year 1919, except income, war profits, or excess-profit taxes, and those assessed against local benefits of a kind tending to improve the value of the property.

Loss of property not connected with trade or business rising from fires, storms, shipwreck, or other casualty, or from theft, if not compensated for by insurance or otherwise.

Interest paid or accrued on indebtedness except indebtedness incurred to purchase securities, the interest upon which is exempt from tax.

STATEN ISLAND CARS SUSPEND OPERATION

The Staten Island Midland Railway Company will be required to explain in the Special Term of the Supreme Court of Brooklyn this morning why it carried out its program of suspending operation of its cars when it was generally known that an order had been issued by Justice Faber of the Supreme Court for continued operation. This order was served on Traffic Superintendent Harry J. Blackham because the process servers could not gain access to the home of R. L. Rand, Vice President and General Manager of the company.

It was said yesterday the company would argue that the service was improper because Mr. Blackham is not an officer of the company. Assistant Corporation Counsel George P. Nicholson said the city would contend Mr. Rand knew of the order, and that if this could be proved Mr. Rand would be liable for contempt.

Federal Judge Chatfield, sitting in Brooklyn, yesterday appointed Jacob Brenner Commissioner of Jurors of Kings, as receiver of the company's property, on the application of the Westinghouse Electric Company, which also was plaintiff in the receivership proceedings against the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company. The company joined in the application, thereby following out its program of suspending traffic, winding up its affairs and surrendering its franchises. Mr. Brenner will take charge of the property of the company today.

City's Efforts Forestalled.

The intervention of the Federal Court may complicate the proceedings in the State courts. The efforts of the city to force the company to operate its cars, it was said, had been forestalled and the Midland Company virtually was out of business and would stay out unless the Board of Estimate permitted it to charge a seven-cent fare.

The 17,000 passengers who daily had patronized the lines of the company were forced yesterday to ride buses, private conveyances or on other cars, or walked. Governor A. Whalen, Superintendent of Plant and Structures, took a dozen motor buses to the island on the 5:30 o'clock boat yesterday morning to St. George and started them out on five of the car routes. He left word with assistants to round up as many buses as they could and to start them for the island as fast as possible. During the day, more than seventy-five buses of all styles and ages were in operation.

Mr. Whalen said 100 buses would be operating over the abandoned routes today if needed. Each bus driver was told that the fare would be 5 cents. The longest trip was from New Dorp to St. George, about ten miles. Mr. Whalen was jubilant last night. He said that during the rush hours the buses ran on a two-minute schedule and at other times every five to seven minutes. Late in the day the viaduct to the upper level of the Midland Company, formerly used by the Midland Company, was planked and the buses used it to get direct to the ferry.

Says Everybody is Satisfied.

"Everybody seems to be satisfied with the situation," Mr. Whalen told the reporters. "The company operated only twenty cars, and there is a difference between operating fifty buses and less than half as many cars. There appears to be no doubt that the buses are serving the public better than it was ever served before.

During the evening there were rumors that employes of the Midland Company had threatened to tear up the planking on the viaduct. The police made preparations to suppress any outbreak. Some of the residents of the island indicated a willingness to aid the police in maintaining order and to help maintain traffic. They placed their own automobiles at the disposal of Mr. Whalen. Former District Attorney Albert C. Fach, who owns a small bus line between Fox Hills and St. George, consented to take charge of the municipal buses and see that they were properly operated.

The attendance was light in schools on the island because parents were unwilling to let their children ride in the buses. The bus lines in operation were between St. George and Richmond, St. George and Port Richmond, via Concord and Silver Lake; from Broadway, West Brighton, to Castleton Corners, and from Red Lane, Grant City, to Midland Beach.

TURKS PROTEST TO ENTENTE

Urge "Inalienable Rights" to Constantinople and Other Territory.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 14.—Protests against the reported intention of the Peace Conference to dismember the Turkish Empire and to internationalize this city were voiced at a great mass meeting held here today. Great enthusiasm was aroused on Turkey's "inalienable rights" to Constantinople.

Resolutions were adopted declaring Constantinople should be maintained as the capital of Turkey and the seat of the Government; demanding the evacuation of Smyrna and adjacent regions by the Greeks; asking for an immediate conclusion of peace; asserting the integral sovereignty of the Turkish nation should be maintained over territories in which the majority of the inhabitants are Turks, and giving assurance that the rights and interests of Christian or Turkish minorities would be safeguarded.

Many meetings were held in Anatolia during the day under the auspices of Turkish national leaders, and the following resolution was passed:

"Districts of the empire inhabited by Turks must be respected. We cannot accept any decision contrary to this principle, and are immovable in our decision."

WILL FIGHT 'DRYS' AT POLLS.

Camels to Begin Political Battle at Both Party Conventions.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 19.—The methods used by the prohibitionists to establish prohibition will be used by the anti-prohibitionists to revoke it, according to Claude R. Diegle, Grand Secretary of the Order of Camels, a national organization formed to fight prohibition.

Mr. Diegle said political action would be employed by the order. In every case, he said, the order woul doppose a prohibitionist rather than favor any one anti-prohibitionist. "The first important action will be at the national conventions of the Republican and Democratic parties this Summer," said Mr. Diegle.

100 Philadelphia Liquor Complaints.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19.—Federal agents in charge of the enforcement of prohibition in this city said today that nearly 100 complaints of violations of the law had been received since the Federal Amendment went into effect. Virtually all the complaints, it was said, were anonymous and were largely against saloonkeepers. Roy L. Daily, in charge of enforcement in this city, said he intended to investigate every case reported.

DISAPPROVES CITY SCHOOL SITE PLANS

Edward B. Shallow Declares He Cannot Accept Controller's Recommendations.

A reply was made yesterday by Associate Superintendent Edward B. Shallow, in charge of public school sites, to the Board of Education answering statements made by Controller Craig in a report to the Board of Estimate on Dec. 26 last. Mr. Shallow said that a total of $25,000,000 had been made available for new schools by the present city administration, and this was encouraging and a matter for congratulation.

"But now," he continued, "although we are pleased to know that $15,000,000 has been authorized in 1919 and 1920 for new schools and sittings, I cannot accept the recommendations by the Controller, as contained in his report, nor do I agree with his notion in eliminating certain necessary items on what he conceives to be superior investigations, made under his direction."

The Controller recommends that the new Washington Heights High School be built at 140th Street and Hamilton Place. This, it is pointed out, is almost at the extreme southerly end of the territory known as Washington Heights, and at a point which is at least forty cbity blocks—more than a mile and a half—further south than the vicinity where the majority of his people want the school to be situated.

The addition of 720 sittings to Public School 115, 170th Street and Audubon Avenue, is most desirable, he continues, but the Controller has denied the request for funds for it. A new building for the Julia Richmond High School is badly needed, but nothing has been done about it. The building of a new elementary school west of Broadway and south of 181st Street in the Sixteenth District, recommended by the Controller, is declared to be "entirely unwise." There is no large school population to be accommodated in this district.

The Board of Education requested money for addition to Public School 55, the Bronx, to contain 1,680 sittings. The Controller, it is alleged, has said that this was "not requested by the Board of Education." He has not recommended funds for the erection of an addition to Public School 33, Jerome Avenue and 184th Street, nor for either a site or a building in the northerly part of the High Bridge section, where, the report says, they are needed. He has not recommended a new high school building in Bronxwville nor a new building for the New Utrecht High School.

Mr. Shallon's review of the Controller's report was approved and will be submitted to the full Board of Education at its meeting late in the month.

$7,000,000 for Improvements, $5,000,000 for Maintenance, and $400,000 for Surveys.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—With much of its "pork" eliminated, the annual Rivers and Harbors Appropriation bill carrying funds for the next fiscal year was reported today to the House by the Ways and Means Committee. The bill would appropriate only $12,400,000, a slashing down of $30,500,000 from the total of estimates submitted to the committee and a considerable cut from the amounts usually carried by the measures.

"The funds now available in addition to the lump sum of $7,000,000 for further improvement work," the report state, "should be ample to prosecute without interrupting the progress of the work. The plan adopted in this bill will permit the Secretary of War to allot funds to the different works as the maintenances work is needed, and it is expected the annual amount appropriated under this plan in the future will be considerably below former appropriations in amount and that a sufficient unallotted fund will be available for this appropriation at all times to prosecute emergency work at any locality when it becomes necessary."

DEFENDS WAR HOUSING.

Sherman Says Politics Inspired Senate's Criticism.

L. K. Sherman, President of the United States Housing Corporation, in reply to charges by the Senate Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, which brought about a proposal for the abolition of the corporation and the transfer of its remaining functions to the Treasury Department, has written a letter in which he charges that one of the committee's chief investigators said an adverse report on the corporation's activities "could be used in a political way in the next campaign." The letter, addressed to Senator Bert L. Fernald, Chairman of the committee, says the corporation did not have a fair chance to be heard in rebuttal of testimony offered against it.

Mr. Sherman says the present officials are "proud of an indictment" in the committee's report, which, while it held them not responsible for the organization's politics, said they should have been less committed to "the theory that their predecessors, who left office soon after the armistice, were infallible."

Mr. Sherman says the policies of the present management and its efficiency have not been criticised.

THE NATIONAL CITY BANK OF NEW YORK, Trustee

Application will be made to list the Bonds on the New York Stock Exchange

For further information concerning these Bonds, we refer to a letter of Mr. Geo. B. Cortelyou, President of the Company, which he has summarized as follows:

The Consolidated Gas Company of New York directly and through its subsidiaries does practically the entire gas and electric light and power business in the Borough of Manhattan, New York City, and in large parts of the Boroughs of The Bronx and Queens, and in Westchester County, serving a present estimated population of 4,000,000. The gross revenue of the Consolidated Gas System in 1919, after eliminating inter-company transactions, was over $70,000,000, of which 58% was derived from the electric business and 42% from the artificial gas business.

The Five Year Secured Seven Per Cent. Convertible Gold Bonds will constitute the only bonded debt of the Consolidated Gas Company of New York, and the Company will covenant that it will not execute any mortgage upon, or make any pledge of, any of its property other than shares of stock owned by it, unless the Convertible Bonds outstanding shall be secured equally and ratably therewith.

The $25,000,000 Convertible Bonds will be further secured by the pledge with the Trustee of $35,000,000 par value, or over a majority of the capital stock of The New York Edison Company, the annual dividends upon which alone exceed the amount required for interest on these Bonds.

The various companies comprising the System possess franchises for furnishing gas and electric service which, in the opinion of counsel, contain no burdensome restrictions, are entirely adequate for the business requirements of the companies and, for the most part, are perpetual.

The figures thus far available indicate net earnings of the System in 1919 after operating expenses, taxes, etc. (including $3,058,609 for renewal and replacement reserve) of $13,643,549, or an amount over twice the annual interest on the funded and other debt of the System with the public, including that on the $25,000,000 Seven Per Cent. Convertible Bonds and the dividends paid to minority stock of subsidiaries.

Bonds are offered for delivery, when, as and if issued and received by us. It is anticipated that temporary bonds will be ready for delivery on or about February 2, 1920, and that definitive engraved bonds will be available about April 1, 1920.

Bank acceptances are the direct obligations of the accepting institutions. They are, therefore, equivalent in effect to the cashiers' checks of such accepting institutions payable at a definite future date.

They also have behind them the additional responsibility of the drawer and such endorsers as there may be.

They can be turned into cash readily. Even during the recent money tightness millions of dollars of acceptances changed hands daily in the open market at about 5%.

They are more liquid than time deposits with a bank and they yield from 1% to 3% more than can beobtained on either demand or time deposits.

They can be obtained in maturities and denominations to meet practically any requirement.

They are purchased at the present time in round amounts by banks throughout the country, but they are equally desirable as an investment for funds only temporarily available to other corporations, firms and individuals.

SON SAYS CROKER ACCUSED A JUDGE

YOUNG WIFE ALSO QUOTED

Alleged statements by Richard Croker, former Tammany leader, that one of the best known Supreme Court Justices conspired with Richard Croker, Jr., the leader's son, to tie up some of his property, and by his young wife, Mrs. Ruth Croker, that because of her husband's influence with the courts his son couldn't succeed in his litigation against his father, were revealed in papers filed in the Supreme Court yesterday when Justice Davis granted the father's application to open his default in the three suits brought by his son last June.

The name of the Supreme Court Justice involved has not been made known, but the son stated, in an affidavit concerning his libel suit, that "he is one of the ablest and best known Judges of this court. To mention his name would be a complete refutation of the charges that he ever conspired with anybody to defraud the defendant, and in addition would make ridiculous the charges of the defendant."

Young Mrs. Croker denied that she ever spoke of her aged husband's influence with the courts and he also declared that she never said it and that the statements were "deliberately manufactured to prejudice this application."

The decision of Justice Davis vacates a judgment for $137,181 and directs the trial of a suit by Richard Crocker, Jr., against his father for moneys alleged to have been paid out as agent for his father, and takes similar action concerning a judgment for $80,019 in a suit against his father for breaking an agreement that if Richard would give his share of about $80,000 from his mother's estate to his brother Howard, the father would give like amount to Howard and his sister Ethel. In the third suit, in which no judgment was taken, the son sued his father for alleged libel, and the father merely asked permission to answer the suit.

Says He Owes Son Nothing.

The plea of the elder Croker for the opening of the default in each case was based on statements that he owes his son nothing and that he had no chance to defend the actions but had to let them go by default because the summonses were served on him last June, the night before he sailed for his estate in Ireland, at which time his physician in Florida had insisted that because of his serious condition of health he should return home as soon as possible. He contended that his son had sued merely to annoy him.

Richard Croker, Jr., did not object to opening the default in the libel suit, and concerning the case he said:

"For more than two years past my father has made serious libellous statements concerning me. I have tried to convince him of his error in the hope that he would retract. I desire now that the case be tried in open court because otherwise the defendant would not be heard and there would be no opportunity to prove the error into which he has fallen."

For the purpose of showing his father's "efforts to disgrace" him the plaintiff told Justice Davis that the alleged libellous statements were made in letters and were as follows:

"I have found out he has been cheating his old father all along."

"2. I have had a letter from Florence and Richard is cheating her out of her share. He only sent her $1,500 a year when she should have got $4,000. He has had full charge of my bank account and has not failed to draw liberally from it."

"3. I can see it all now. You were not satisfied until you and ——— (meaning one of the Justices of the Supreme Court of New York County) conspired against me and tied up this fund. I am glad of one thing, that I have lived long enough to find you out. You have been playing a great game with my money right along."

Justice Davis imposed no terms on the defendant in opening the defaults except that he pay full costs of the cases to date. The son asked the court to rule that the judgments obtained should stand as security for the payment of any sum that may be recovered, and that his father agree to submit to examination of himself and all his books and papers before trial.

In asking security the son said that no property of his father has been found here on which to levy an execution on the judgments. He said further:

"I am informed that the defendant has transferred his property in Ireland to his present wife. I have no knowledge as to whether he has taken similar action concerning his property in Florida."

In explaining the circumstances under which the suits were brought the night on which the suits were brought the night son said:

"I went to see my father at the National Democratic Club to try to adjust our differences. I told him I thought it ought to be done because of his age and his health and because he was sailing on the morrow, but after listening to me for half an hour he rose and said he wouldn't be bothered further. Then I went with him to another room and instructed a process server waiting there to serve the three summonses. My father threw them on the floor and left the club, but I learned later that they were picked up and put in his box at the desk. My father has never explained his changed attitude toward me and his other children or his revocation of the power of attorney I held."

Mrs. Mary B. Croker, wife of Richard Jr., said in an affidavit that she went to the Hotel Savoy to see her father-in-law the morning he sailed, to make a final plea for the adjustment of the family differences without the necessity of airing the troubles in court.

"I told him the suits were brought only after the efforts of Richard, Howard, and Ethel to settle in a friendly manner failed," said Mrs. Croker. "When I was making my appeal to the defendant, his wife, who stood with him, said: 'We cannot be bothered any longer. We must go. Anyway, considering Mr. Croker's influence, do you imagine his son has any chance in court?' I replied: 'I know nothing about that, but I assume the cases will be tried on their merits.'"

Cordial Until His Marriage.

Frederick R. Ryan of counsel for the son said yesterday that the relations between father and son were "of the most cordial nature" until Mr. Croker's second marriage on Thanksgiving Day, 1914, following the death of his first wife in September of that year. The attitude of Mr. Croker to all his children changed suddenly, said the attorney, and in 1916 the father withdrew his properties here from the management of his son, and in 1917 revoked his power of attorney. Concerning an allegation by the father that the son refuses to turn over warehouse property on the east side, but still holds it in his name, the son replied yesterday that he retains this property under a written authorization from his father.

While the elder Croker denies that he made the agreement concerning the payment of the $80,000 to Howard, Richard, Jr., says in affidavits that the agreement was made in the presence of his wife, Howard and Ethel, and that he has a letter from his father showing that he has full knowledge of the agreement.

The trust fund referred to in the alleged libellous statement by the defendant involving a Supreme Court Justice, was a trust created by Mr. Croker and his first wife, for the benefit of their children, and of this fund Richard, Jr., is trustee. He filed an action last month for permission to account for the fund and to have the court determine who the beneficiaries of the fund are. The principal of this fund now amounts to $130,150, and the income has been $69,695 of which the mother got $26,805 and the rest went to Ethel, Florence and Howard Croker, Florence, received only $5,833 while Ethel got $8,883 and Howard $9,233. The father is now trying to revoke the trust fund.

The papers filed yesterday do not indicate that Florence Croker, who is Mrs. Florence C. Morris, is allied with her brothers and sister in the litigation with their father, neither do they show that she is in sympathy with her father. She has lived in Ireland for some years.

TO DEAL IN SUGAR FUTURES.

Exchange Announces Trading Will Be Resumed Feb. 16.

Dealings in contracts for the future delivery of sugar will be resumed by the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange on Feb. 16, after a suspension of such transactions for two years and a half. The announcement of the resumption of this business was contained in a resolution adopted by the Board of Managers and made public yesterday.

When the sugar business is resumed, fluctuations in prices will be limited to 1 cent a pound in either direction on any one day.

TRADING IN COTTON SHOWS UNCERTAINTY

Market Reflects Belief That Deflation and Price Reduction Will Be Pushed.

NEAR MONTHS ARE STRONG

The cotton market yesterday clearly reflected the uncertain frame of mind of the trade and the belief, steadily gaining advocates, that the process of deflation and price reduction is already in progress and likely to be pushed to the limit. The statistical position seems to favor an advance, despite the contentions of many that a big carry-over into next season is indicated, while the psychology of the situation apparently favors the bears. This being the case, it would be natural for the near months to be much stronger than the distant months, and that is precisely what was shown in yesterday's market.

At the opening the list was firm, and the relative positions of near and far months were uniform. Then January advanced about 50 points and March about 33 over Saturday's closing, while May went up only 15 points and July rose only 7 points. On the decline which followed this bulge the far months lost much more than the near options, the decline in July being 30 points net, while January never did go below Saturday's final quotation, and March sold only 5 points under the previous closing.

What was considered significant of the strength of the near positions was the advance in the spot quotation, which went up 50 points to the basis of 38.75. This is the highest spots have sold at here since the first week in December. In fact, it is the first change, with one exception, since the market settled at the 39¼ cent. level on Dec. 17. On Jan. 7 there was a dip to 39 cents, but the next day the price was back at 39¼ and had remained there ever since until yesterday. The advance gave rise to some talk of a squeeze in the January contract, which runs out next week.

The Liverpool market was steady yesterday, with futures showing firmness and with spots up to 29.28d., a rise of 62 points from last Friday. Trade reports from England continue optimistic, and there is still talk of great activity at Manchester and elsewhere. The Southern spot markets yesterday were less active than usual. Exports over the week-end totaled 42,772 bales, well distributed over the ports.

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.	Prev. Day.
Jan.	38.40	38.86	38.35	38.70@38.75	38.23
March	36.50	36.70	36.40	36.54@36.58	36.35

Sept.	...	...	...	30.80	... 30.85
Oct.	30.50	30.54	30.20	30.35	... 30.42

Southern spot markets were: Galveston, 42.50c; New Orleans, 40.25c; Augusta, 39.50c; Memphis, 40.50c; Houston, 42c; Little Rock, 40c.

RAILROADS' PROBLEMS.

New tariff schedules for railroads to insure them against monetary difficulties suggested in an article in The Annalist this week. Published by The New York Times Company. 10 cents at news stands.—Advt.

When you invest a dollar select a loan which is ALWAYS worth a dollar

There are bonds which do not appreciably fluctuate in value and have every other element of complete safety of principal and of interest which any bond can furnish. There are other bonds, which, through the equity behind them, are considered by most investors to be safe, and yet which may depreciate so greatly in market price before maturity that in the event of the investor desiring to liquidate, he may obtain only a small proportion of his investment.

At times business expansion or other causes may so increase the demand for money and, therefore, increase interest rates current that many long term bonds may seriously depreciate in price. Long term bonds are always likely to encounter, before their maturity, unexpected and unfavorable conditions to which short term issues are not subject.

Throughout the acid test of war-time conditions, bonds based on high grade, centrally located, improved, income-producing real estate, the loans rapidly amortized and the bonds yielding five per cent or better, commanded a price practically unimpaired from the price of issue. This condition was common both to the United States and to England, France and Italy.

As against this, we present a table of bonds based on securities always considered the highest grade, with the proper equity margin essential to first-grade securities, based on railroad enterprises, which were adversely affected at times by national and local conditions which then prevailed. This must not be taken to mean that these bonds were not good investments, nor that the investor will not receive his principal intact at the maturity of the obligation; it does show, however, a condition of fluctuation which is not common to the highest grade of bonds, based on that oldest principle of wise investment—a short term issue rapidly amortized.

There are sound reasons why first-grade bonds based on real estate, surrounded by the proper safeguards, do not fluctuate in value. That they do not is history. The reasons why they do not fluctuate cannot fail to be of interest and importance to any prospective investor. Freedom from fluctuation. We shall be glad to send you, on request, a booklet showing why these Bonds do not fluctuate, and showing also the demonstrable superiority of bonds so based on prime real estate, and the necessities of business: the loans underlying these bonds being so rapidly amortized, that the investor has a constantly increasing equity beyond the value he purchased.

We offer the highest grade bonds known, based on basic values, yielding 5½ per cent and guarantee them—both as to principal and interest—and backed by every dollar of our resources.

GREEK BUYS IRISH BONDS.

Learned About Ireland in Athens—Subscriptions Please de Valera.

No figures on the progress of the Sinn Fein effort to obtain $10,000,000 for the "Irish Republic" were available at headquarters yesterday, due, it was stated, to the impossibility of tabulating the subscriptions received. The only donations announced were from a man in Juneau, Alaska, who wrote that he wanted two of the certificates, and a Greek waiter, who learned about Ireland while a lad in Athens. The waiter took a $50 certificate and ten others to pass around to his friends.

According to headquarters, there has been a rush of Americans to exchange their Liberty bonds for the non-obligatory certificates of Sinn Fein indebtedness which begin to yield interest six months after the British troops evacuate Ireland. The American silt-edges are being transformed into Sinn Fein paper on the advice of the American Commission on Irish Independence, which urged all to "get the Liberty out of their Liberty bonds."

"President" de Valera, in jubilant mood over the elections in Erin, was keenly delighted at the pace of the loan here. Nobody had anything to say about Alderman Quinn's charge that the loan was a "fraudulent scheme," nor did Mayor Hylan reply to Quinn's characterization of him as "a cheap, pettifogging demagogue."

LAWYERS MORTGAGE CO. BUYS NEW SITE

DEAL INVOLVES $1,600,000

Sale to Almona Galleries Influenced by Erection of New Park Avenue Hotel by du Pont Interests.

As a site for an eleven-story office building, the Lawyers' Mortgage Company of which Richard M. Hurd is President, yesterday closed contracts for the property on the northeast corner of Nassau Street and Maiden Lane.

The property, which is known as 58 Nassau Street and 29, 31, and 33 Maiden Lane, is located directly opposite the site of the proposed Federal Reserve Bank. It was purchased from various owners and interests and consists of three old five-story buildings, covering a plot with a frontage of 43 feet in Nassau Street and 57 feet in Maiden Lane.

They were held at about $750,000, and it is understood that the buying company paid about that price.

Mr. Hurd stated yesterday that the deal had been pending for several weeks past owing to involved title and the fact that the property was leased to various tenants. As soon as these expire or can be purchased, the company will begin the erection of the new structure, the ground floor of which will be occupied by the Lawyers' Mortgage Company. There will be safe deposit vaults in the basement, and the upper floors will be leased to tenants—one to a floor.

It is estimated that the entire improvement will involve about $1,600,000. Cammann, Voorhees & Floyd negotiated the transaction. Two other deals are reported pending in the same vicinity, one, which involves the erection of a $500,000 building, will probably be closed today.

AIMONE GALLERY TO BUILD.

Purchases East Side Site for Artistic Structure.

Influenced by the recent announcement that the du Pont interests would improve the block front on the west side of Park Avenue, between Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth Streets, with a hotel, the Aimone Galleries yesterday purchased as a site for a new building 42 and 44 East Forty-ninth Street.

The property, which consists of two four-story and basement private dwellings, on a plot 48 by 100.10 feet, located between Madison and Park Avenues, was sold by Mrs. Lawrence Jacob, who had held title to the property for over forty years. Plans are now being considered for the improvement of the site, which was held at $175,000, with a modern structure of artistic design. Pease & Elliman negotiated the sale. Zars, Jacob being represented in the transaction by Albert Pease as agent.

Hatch

FROM THE VERY BEGINNING

I have given the people the very best Salto-Nuts, Chocolates and Nutted Fruits that I could select and prepare.

Result: My business now requires 4 stores—3 on the west side of Broadway near 30th, 42d and 50th Streets, and 1 in Herald Square, 6th Avenue near 33d Street.

Some day I hope to have a store in every neighborhood in New York. I am looking with longing eyes for a store on Fifth Avenue, but I must wait for the aristocracy of my purse to match the aristocracy of a location on Fifth Avenue.

My specialties, however, Salto-Nuts (registered), Chocolates and Nutted Fruits, match in their quality and aristocracy anything that Fifth Avenue sells to the people.

If you wish to order by mail—write Hatch, Herald Square, New York, for catalog and prices. As a guide for immediate ordering I quote the following prices:

Salto-Nuts—mixed—$2.25 the lb.
Italian Chocolates—$1.50 the lb.
Supreme Chocolates—$1.75 the lb.
Nutted Caramels—$2.00 the lb.

Remember—"Hatch, he pays the parcel post." Telephone Greeley 941.

LAY PLANS TO CURE WAR'S NERVE WEAR

MANY KEPT FROM TRENCHES

Army Physician Says Tests Eliminated Thousands on Nervous and Mental Cases.

Attention was directed from two quarters yesterday toward the mental and nervous disease problems that may confront this country as a direct result of its participation of the war. While in both cases the authorities seemed to apprehend some increase in these classes of cases, attention was directed to the weeding out process which accompanied all forms of recruiting for our military forces, and which, it was felt, would tend to make unfavorable reaction to the strenuous environment of war less numerous than would have been the case if admissions to the army and navy had been less discriminate.

The annual report of the New Jersey State Hospital for the Insane at Morris Plains, made public in Trenton yesterday, was from the pen of the late Dr. Britton D. Evans, one of the country's famous alienists. Dr. Evans recommended immediate provision by State institutions, already overcrowded, for a marked increase in mental diseases and in institutional commitments which he anticipated as an aftermath of the war.

Dr. Evans believed that many persons who actually had been under treatment for nervous diseases and border-line cases had been passed for military service by draft boards. In addition, he said, many persons of constitutional psychopathic makeup volunteered because of the excitement for which they hoped.

Others, he continued, realising their own shortcomings, entered the service for the sake of the discipline they knew they would encounter. In this classs, he wrote, were drug addicts who had passed beyond the point of self-control, and many inebriates. Now that such men were released from discipline he felt that some would relapse.

The National Committee for Mental Hygiene announced yesterday that the same problems to which Dr. Evans referred in his report would be considered next month at the third convention here of mental rygiene societies of the United States and Canada, when the leading military and lay psychiatrists would discuss various phases of the subject.

The committee, whose Medical Director, Dr. Thomas W. Salmon, was in charge of mental and nervous diseases in the A. E. F., stated that mental examinations in the army eliminated thousands of cases of men who would have developed mental or nervous troubles if they had been allowed to reach the front.

"Consequently," says its announcement, "the amount of mental disease, crime, suicide, and war neurosis in the American Expeditionary Forces was much smaller than might have been expected on the basis of allied experience. Nevertheless, as all men who were passed by local boards and later discharged at the camps are eligible for treatment at the expense of the Government, 35 per cent. of the men discharged from the army and now under the care of the War Risk Insurance Bureau and the Public Health Service are mental or nervous cases."

CALLS ON NIXON FOR TRACTION REPORT

State Senate Asks Him to Submit Recommendations for Solution of Problem.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 19.—Lewis Nixon, New York City Public Service Commissioner, tonight was called upon by the Senate to submit to it recommendations for the solution of the New York City traction situation and his report on an investigation of the situation, if he has made such an inquiry.

Senator J. Henry Walters, President pro tem of the Senate succeeded in having the Assembly's resolution amended to provide that Mr. Nixon state whether he has concluded such an investigation with particular reference to the increased fare problem. In amended form the resolution goes back to the Assembly for concurrence.

"We last year created two commissions in New York City," declared Senator Walters, in explaining why the Republican majority fathered the resolution. "Either we must keep these two commissions or we must repeal the acts which created them and set up new ones. We want to know whether the commissions we created are efficient or not."

During the debate on the resolution Senator George F. Thompson of Niagara, who investigated the increased fares problem as head of a legislative committee, attacked Mr. Nixon.

"I object to asking Mr. Nixon's opinion," he declared. "I don't believe his opinion on the necessity for increased fares in New York City is of value, because after he was appointed he went about the streets of New York as a friend of the railroads clamoring for an increase. I don't believe he has made an investigation, and I think the only thing which he has upon which to base an opinion is the Stone & Webster report."

Senator Thompson added that in his opinion the Legislature could do nothing to solve the increased fare problem in New York City. He further demanded an amendment to the Assembly resolution to require Mr. Nixon in his requested report to the Legislature to make plain the source of his information on which he may make recommendations. This amendment was lost.

The resolution adopted reads as follows:

"Whereas Governor Smith recommended the abolition of the five-headed Public Service Commission of the First District and the appointment of a single regulatory Commissioner, assuring the Legislature of 1919 that this action would produce beneficial results in the acute traction situation in New York City; and

"Whereas, the Legislature acquiesced in his recommendations and such problem is daily becoming more acute and its speedy solution is of vital importance to the residents of the City of New York.

"Be it resolved, that such Commissioner be hereby requested to report to this Legislature whether he has made an investigation of such traction situation, with the results, together with the facts, figures and information."

Trial of Edward A. Rumely, former owner of The Evening Mail, on an indictment charging him with having failed to report his personal interest in the newspaper to the Alien Property Custodian, will begin before Federal Judge Cushman on Feb. 23. Rumely appeared in court yesterday with his counsel, Stephen C. Baldwin, who, pleading for an early trial, said his client had been waiting nearly two years and that he had been subjected to much trouble and inconvenience because of the delay.

N. R. Lindheim and T. Walter Kaufmann, lawyers, who were indicted with Rumely, will be tried at the same time. The date for the trial was set by Federal Judge A. N. Hand at the request of counsel for the defendants.

HEAR BEECHNUT PRICE CASE

Federal Court Reserves Decision After Arguments.

Argument was heard yesterday by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals on the petition of the Beech Nut Packing Company for a review of the action of the Federal Trade Commission on June 30 last, forbidding the company to seek to control prices charged by distributers for its products. Charles H. Hughes and Charles Wesley Dunn appeared for the company, and Claude R. Porter, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, represented the Government.

The case is similar to that of the "Colgate Plan" of maintaining prices, which was by the simple method of refusing to sell to dealers unless they agreed to charge the prices fixed by the manufacturer. Proceedings were instituted against the concern on the ground that its methods violated Section 5 of the Federal Trade act, relating to unfair trade methods.

Decision was reserved.

THRIFT OR DRIFT?
(A THRIFT WEEK ACROSTIC)

Here's a timely definition;
Raise your hopes—breathe success—doubt dispel,
In your fight for recognition ignore fear and competition,
For, "it's your backbone, not your wishbone,
That will tell"!

$10,000.00 CASH ESTATE

You open an account with us and deposit annually approximately from 3½ to 4¾ per cent. of this amount, and at a definite, stated time you will receive, if living, $10,000.00 in Cash. Should you die tomorrow, or any time, we will immediately pay the entire $10,000.00 to your family.

A 5-minute interview (without obligation) will prove the best investment of time you have ever made. Write or phone when we may call.
